BECKER, Ferdinand

Bath ?1739–1825

The honorary exhibitor at the Royal Academy in 1793, whose name is given by Graves (1905) as “E. Becker” (perhaps from the catalogue’s Esq.) is surely the topographical draughtsman Ferdinand Becker. He later exhibited landscapes at the British Institution in 1810, giving his address as 13 Gay Street, Bath. Although he made a number of engravings, he was primarily a watercolourist. In 1794 he advertised that he had “found our a new mode to facilitate the art of drawings and assist natural genius” using a method of “blots”, probably that of Cozens. He was then living in lodgings at 21 Brock Street, Bath. By 1798 he had moved to 17 Queen Square, where new examples of his landscape drawings were to be seen; he was listed there as a “landscape-painter and drawing-master” in the New Bath guide for 1802.. At some stage he also taught twice a week at Miss Lee’s school, Belvedere House, Bath.

He was executor of the £2000 estate left by the Italian singer and composer Venanzio Rauzzini on his death in Bath in 1810. In 1812 Becker married a Marianne Deverel of Clifton. He died at 39 Green Park Buildings “universally esteemed and lamented”. His wife died at the same address in 1855; her estate of some £28,000 was left to various charities and to establish a fund for poor clergymen. While Ferdinand’s death in 1825 is widely cited, the year of his birth is given only on some websites without obvious authority, and may be incorrect.
