CORREGGIO, Antonio Allegri, il

Correggio .VIII.1489–5.III.1534

Bellori reports that Barocci was inspired to work in pastel by the “teste divinissime a pastelli di mano del Correggio”, and he mentions that pastels by both Correggio and Barocci belonged to a gentleman from Urbino, Francesco Bene or Beni, in his studio in Rome. (Bellori did not however think that Barocci’s method of using pastels was based on Correggio’s.) It is impossible to tell from Bellori or from old auction records to what extent the works described were in fact pastels rather than coloured chalk drawings; no drawing in pastel by Correggio has survived, and the recorded “pastels” which can be traced (such as three drawings in the Mariette sale, Lot 119, now in the Louvre) are not by him, and may contain no pastel. Rosalba Carriera (q.v.) was among the artists who copied Correggio’s work in pastel. Pierre Crozat was a particular enthusiast, and wrote a biography of the artist.
