DIGBY, Simon

Kilminchy c.1645 – Lacken 1720

In 1668 Digby was appointed chaplain to the 1st Duke of Ormond. He became bishop of Limerick in 1678, and thirteen years later was translated to Elphin. An active amateur artist, he was “a great master of painting in little watercolours and by that quality [he] recommended himself to men in power and ladies, and so was early made a bishop.” It has been suggested that he may have taught Henrietta Johnston (q.v.). Digby’s sole known pastel, a portrait of Ormond, is however a copy after Ashfield. It was mentioned in a letter from William Butler to Sir Donat O’Brien (2.v.1711, Inchiquin Mss, no. 2621): “The Duchess of Ormonde lately sent his Grace’s picture to the old bishop [Simon Digby] to be repaired. He returned it ‘amended’, and two nice new copies in return. Whereof she sent pencils and rules to the young damsels who as it is believed will exceed their father in that particular.” It is uncertain whether the picture sent by the Duchess was Digby’s or the original Ashfield; nor is it clear if the daughters (Letitia married Thomas Loftus of Killyan, while Elizabeth married the Very Rev. Jeremy Marsh, Dean of Kilmore) practised in pastel.
