GIBSON, Richard

?Cumberland 1615 – London 1690

English miniaturist, known as the Dwarf on account of his stature (1.17 m.). He enjoyed success at court and taught the future Queen Anne. From 1677 to perhaps 1688 he was in The Hague, as tutor to Princess Mary. Several members of the family were artists, notably Susan Penelope, Mrs Rosse, a miniaturist, and Edward Gibson (q.n.).

He is thought to have taken up crayons under the influence of Lely (q.n.). The two sheets in the British Museum seem significantly different in technique and level of accomplishment.
