LARGILLIERRE, Nicolas de

Paris 1656–1746

Agréé 1683; reçu 1686; Largillierre (or Largillière) was one of the most important portraitists of his era. Around 1710, and perhaps more so after Carriera's trip to Paris in 1720, his paintings began to show the influence of pastel, both in colouring and handling (Largillierre 1982, p. 244f; Rosenfeld 1992). Did he work in pastel? Ratouis de Limay thought the repetition of his autoportrait from the Erlanger collection might be autograph, but it seems unconvincing that so prolific an artist should have made a single foray into this medium. In his posthumous inventory (26.III.1746; it listed his pictures in 210 separate items) not a single pastel appeared. The attribution of the pastel from the 1895 sale likewise must be regarded as speculative.
