TILSON, Henry

Yorkshire 1659 – London 1695

Portraitist in oil and pastel; pupil of Sir Peter Lely. He travelled to Paris, Venice and Rome in the 1680s with Michael Dahl (q.v.). After his return to London, he shot himself while depressed as a result of a passion for a Mrs Green, “a woman of great wealth & Interest...[who] recommended Mr Tilson every where and procured him a deal of business” but who it seems did not reciprocate his love.

Vertue noted his “particular genius for Crayons, in which he perform’d admirably well, after the pictures of Correggio, Titian and the Caracci.” Apart from these pastel copies, very few portrait drawings have been traced. They show the artist using pastel more in the manner of Ashfield than of Lely. Woodward describes the 1683 sheet in the British Museum as “rather lifeless”.
