GUÉRIN, François

Paris bpt 22.x.1717–23.iv.1801

Painter, miniaturist and draughtsman; adjoint à professeur at the Académie de Saint Luc; rue Neuve-Saint-Médéric. Guérin exhibited one pastel and a number of oil paintings of religious or mythological subjects at the Académie de Saint-Luc from 1751 until 1756; there is no record of the first name of this painter, although most sources assume that he is the same as the François Guérin who was agrégé à l'Académie royale, 1761, reçu 1761, and exhibited various genre scenes and portraits at the Salons from 1761 to 1783. Some of these seem to have been in pastel, although a larger number of drawings in coloured chalk may give rise to confusions.

The Dresden painting of prince Xavier de Saxe, signed “F. Guérin”, relates to the La Tour pastel of the prince shown in the Salon de 1761. Hitherto thought to date to that or the previous year, the private accounts of the prince (published in 1910, but overlooked) indicate two payments made in .vi.1759: one of 744 livres for “deux portraits en miniature du prince Xavier, fourniture de glaces et étuis”, receipted by “Guérin, peintre”; the other, a “gratification” of 2 louis paid to “les domestiques de M. de Latour, peintre”, suggesting that the La Tour sittings took place earlier than thought hitherto (2018).

François Guérin's dates have long been given incorrectly, as c.1740–1791 (which would preclude identification with the saint-lucien painter). In fact he was baptised at Saint-Jean-en-Grève, Paris, 22.x.1717, his father Pantaléon being a bourgeois de Paris. He was already identified as a “peintre” in the registres de tutelles following his father's death (AN Y4589A, 6.iv.1742). In 1751 he married a Catherine-Éléonore Goyer (1722–1799); of three children, Thomas-François (q.v.) became an artist and picture-dealer.

A pastel self-portrait exhibited in 1908 as by the son relates to a large oil by Guérin père, and is here reattributed to him.

François Guérin died in Paris, rue Montholon, 23.iv.1801; an inventory was taken 12.v.1801 (AN MC/RE/XV/15).

Pictures were noted in the livrets of both académies as owned by wealthy connoisseurs such as Boulongne, Buchelay de Savalette, de Gourgues, and the abbés Breteuil and Pommyer. Jean-Baptiste Massé, who owned a miniature by Guérin, says that he was a pupil of Natoire.
