BIOGRAPHICAL INDEX OF COLLECTORS

This index lists art collectors who have owned pastels, as well as some long established dealers and others owners who may be of interest to users of the Dictionary. It is not a complete list of former owners (for example, owners of single works or those who have inherited family portraits are not normally included). It includes dates of known sales, some inventories and lists of pastels known to have been owned but not sold publicly; pictures traded by dealers are not listed in extenso. All such omissions may be rectified by searching the main articles in Dictionary. Attributions in [] indicate changes from those in the source document (e.g. sales catalogue), but for full details of each pastel, see the main article for the artist. Further biographical details will be found in the references cited or in standard biographical sources which we have not attempted to duplicate, but longer entries are given for more obscure subjects including details which may not be readily ascertainable. Note also that some pastellists included in the Dictionary were also active as collectors; details will then be found in the relevant article (signalled by “Dictionary, artists”). Iconographies for a number of eighteenth century connoisseurs may be found in the iconographical genealogies (occasionally signalled by “Dictionary, genealogy” but not all links are included). Where collections have passed intact to museums, they are not separately listed (consult the Collections file for complete listings, or use the search facility). Living collectors are omitted except where their collections have been published.

Didier AARON (1923–2009), established the firm dealing in old master pictures, furniture and objets d’art in Paris, London and New York. It is now run by his son.

Sir Robert Henry Edward ABDY, 5th Bt (1896–1976), art collector, of Grosvenor Square, Newton Ferrers and Paris. His uncle, Sir William Neville Abdy, 2nd Bt (1844–1910), formed an important collection of mainly Italian paintings, sold at Christie’s, 5.v.1911. Sir Robert inherited a large fortune which enabled him to lead an eccentric life as a connoisseur and collector, spending two years in the Louvre studying XVIII^e furniture. In divorce papers in 1928 he was described as a dealer. Part of his collection, including pictures from early Flemish to Sickert, was sold at Sotheby’s, 28.v.1936.

Edgar Vincent, Viscount d’ABERNON (1857–1941), MP for Exeter 1899–1906, PC, diplomat and financier active in the Levant, ambassador to Germany 1920–26, financier; married Lady Helen Venetia Duncombe. They lived at Esher Place, Surrey until it was sold in 1929, in consequence of which a group of pastels and fashion drawings were auctioned. He owned a pastel by Perronneau as well as those (perhaps) by Glain and La Tour in the 1929 sale.

Pietro ACCORSI (1891–1982), from Turin, art dealer. His collection is now in the Fondazione Accorsi, Turin (q.v.).

Rudolph ACKERMANN (1764–1834), colourman and printseller (n. Suppliers), founded the London firm of art dealers in 1783; it remained in business, in Regent Street, Oxford Street, Bond Street and Belgravia, under the control of his son Rudolph Jr (1793–1868) and grandson Arthur (1830–1914), until 2011, trading under the names Arthur Ackermann Ltd and, 1992–2008, as Ackermann & Johnson. There were overseas branches. The firm handled pastels by Rosalba, Boucher, Cotes, Hamilton, Liotard and Sharples.

The brothers John (1721–1792), Robert (1728–1792), James (1732–1794) and William (1738–1822) ADAM, having overextended themselves on the development of the Adelphi, established a lottery under Adam Buildings Act 1772 (13 Geo. III c.75) for the disposal of buildings and certain contents. The lottery took place in .III.1774. The schedule listed, among the drawings, three pastels by Rosalba Carriera.

Adam, v.q. Law Adam

Henry ADAMS (1838–1918), writer, grandson and great-grandson of US presidents. In a letter to Elizabeth Cameron of 2.VI.1908, he relates that he had visited Mme de Ganay's pastel-show at Georges Petit's with Mrs Cooper Hewitt. On 1.VIII.1909 he told her that he had bought a "little Boucherian pastel-girl smelling a carnation, because [he] wanted something decadent and refined and soft and pretty and ante-20th century, to hold me up against Boldini." To Ward Thoron, 11.X.1909, he related that Edith Wharton had taken him to a bric-a-brac shop opposite the British Embassy on the faubourg Saint-Honoré where he had found an oil version of Mme de Prie which he thought was by Thoron himself, adding that the picture "repeats my pastel and the Louvre miniature", that he had "enough Mme de Pries" unless he could find the original Van Loo pastel.

AGNEW'S (fl. 1817–2013), dealers in old master pictures in London. The firm was established by Thomas Agnew in partnership with V. Zanetti, of Manchester, in 1817, and traded from 43 Old Bond Street from 1876 to 2008. Thomas's son was also Thomas (–1883), while his son, William Lockett Agnew (1858–1918), ran the firm after the retirement of his uncle Sir William (–1910) in 1896 and of Morland Agnew in 1913. The firm's stock has included pastels by Rosalba, Greuze, La Tour, Liotard and Perronneau as well as English artists from Greenhill to Lawrence. Gardner seems to have been a particular interest, and many examples were supplied by the firm to J. P. Morgan's sister Mary, Mrs W. H. Burns (n. s.n. Morgan). The firm's archives are now in the National Gallery; the earlier picture stock books are online, but most of the pastels are in separate drawing stock books.

Maître Albert-Marie-Vincent AICARD (1853–1933), 55 rue Paradis, Marseille, chevalier de la Légion d'honneur 1925, came from a line of avocats au barreau de Marseille. His father, also Albert Aicard, was the subject of a médaille by Jules-Clément Chaplain (musée d'Orsay). He acquired a Perronneau inconnu, 1748 in the outskirts of Dijon, and had owned it for some 45 years by 1927. A sale of his collection of furniture, tapestries, Limoges enamels etc. took place at the château de Saint-Chamaux, Saint-Amancet, 11–15.X.1931.

Emmanuel-Armand de Vignerot du Plessis de Richelieu, duc d'AIGUILLON (1720–1788), gouverneur de Bretagne, ministre, married the marquise de Bréhan's niece. Their son Armand-Désiré, 6e duc d'Aiguillon (1761–1800) presumably inherited the effects of the château d'Aiguillon which were sold at auction in 1790. A number of items of interest were acquired on behalf of the duchesse, but following her arrest she was unable to pay for these lots, which were then transported to the préfecture d'Agen where most were still found in 1861. An inventory was prepared in 6.XII.1794.

Cardinale Alessandro ALBANI (1682–1779) commissioned four heads from Rosalba. The first two, of Cleopatra and an unspecified Virtue, cost 164 ducats, as revealed in correspondence with the cardinal's secretary Giulio Monti (letters of 11.VII.1739, 19.I.1740, 28.I.1741, 1.IV.1741). In 1744 the cardinal commissioned a third, unspecified work, in a personal letter; a fourth, of "una Filosofia o una Musa", was referred to in a letter from Albani to artist, 18.IV.1744. These were presumably the four heads he lent to Katherine Read to copy in 1751.

ALBERT Kasimir von Sachsen, Herzog von Teschen (1738–1822), art collector. In 1766 he married Erzherzogin Marie Christine von Österreich (an amateur pastellist). From 1770 he began to assemble what is now the largest collection of graphic art in the world, the Albertina in Vienna (q.v. for holdings), owned by the Austrian state since 1919.

Jean-Baptiste d'ALBERTAS, marquis de Roux (1716–1790), premier président des comptes, aides et finances de Provence, married, in 1745, Marguerite-Françoise de Montullé (1724–1800), sister of the honoraire-amateur de l'Académie royale. Their son Jean-Baptiste-Suzanne, marquis d'Albertas (1747–1829), who followed his father as a judge in the parlement de Provence, was also a collector. They owned pastels by Boucher, Rosalba and Jeanne Natouire, acquired at the Jullienne and La Live de Jully sales (1767, 1770), as well as a wide collection of French, Italian and Dutch paintings and drawings.

Cardinale Francesco ALBIZZI (1593–1684), Rome. He was trained as a lawyer and only entered the church after the death of his wife in 1623. He became a cardinal in 1654 and a member of the inquisition from 1635, opposing Jansenism. He published several literary works.

Robert ALEXANDER of Boghall (–1774), Edinburgh banker and wine merchant, patron of the arts, supporting the painters David Martin and Jacob More in Rome, and a friend of Benjamin Franklin (whose portrait he commissioned from David Martin). He owned a pastel by La Tour, apparently engraved by Schmidt, which appeared in each of his three posthumous sales. They also included paintings by Zoffany and Wright. He was the son of the Lord Provost of Edinburgh, and his brother William Alexander (1729–1819) lived in France 1776–79.

George ALLAN (1736–1800), FSA, of Blackwell Grange, County Durham, eminent antiquary and collector. According to Hutchinson's Antiquities of Durham, which Allan promoted, he had a collection of numerous crayons attributed to Place but which may have included ones by Greenhill. He also owned a pastel by Gainsborough. Anonymous pastels of him and his wife are now in the NPG, London.

August ALLEBÉ (1838–1927), Dutch painter and lithographer, bequeathed a pastel by Andriessen (Verstegh) to the Rijksmuseum in 1927.

Leon and Charlotte AMAR (fl. 2010), of Palm Beach, donated 64 objects to the Flagler Museum in 2010, including European paintings and furniture as well as Valade's pastel of the marquis de Gourgues.

The anonymous "AMATEUR de Province" who wrote a letter on the secret of fixing pastel in the Journal économique, .II.1758, pp. 63–65, evidently had a collection of pastels, including two by Vivien, presumably of his relatives.

Nicolas Eustache AMBATIELOS (1885–1956), a Greek shipowner, purchased the La Tour président de Rieux from Gimpel and Wildenstein in 1919 for £48,000 but was unable to complete the purchase. His finances were greatly damaged by a long-running dispute with the British government over the late delivery of nine ships; he sued for £8 million but the case was only decided (against him) after his death.

William Amherst Tyssen-Amherst, 1st Baron AMHERST of Hackney (1835–1909), of Didlington Hall, Norfolk, MP and bibliophile. Sales took place in 1908/9 following the suicide of his solicitor who had embezzled funds. A number of English pastels passed to Xavier Haas.

Antonio AMICI MORETTI (–1689), argentiere, gioielliere e "diamantaro", Palazzo al Corso, Rome.

Alexandre ANANOFF (1910–1992): born in Tbilisi, Ananoff was an early enthusiast and writer about space, publishing the seminal work L'Astronautique in 1950, the year in which he organised the first international congress on the subject in Paris. By the end of the 1950s he had turned his attention to art history, publishing an important, if flawed, catalogue of Boucher.

Pastels: H. Drouais, dame en Flore

Édouard ANDRÉ (1833–1894) was born into a family of bankers but trained initially as a soldier. He turned to collecting around 1864, a few years later commissioning Henri Parent to build the hôtel on the boulevard Haussmann that now houses the collection he formed with his wife, the painter Nélie [Nelly] Jacquemart (1841–1912). The musée Jacquemart-André is now owned by the Institut de France.

John Julius ANGERSTEIN (1735–1823), born in St Petersburg, moved to London around 1749 and became a successful merchant and art collector. His collection, formed with advice from Sir Thomas Lawrence, was purchased after his death to form the National Gallery. His daughter Julia married General Sabloukoff; a pastel by Lawrence descended to William Angerstein until the 1896 sale.

London, Christie's, 4.VII.1896:

Lot 101: Lawrence, Mrs Boucherette

Maria ANGIOLILLO (c.1929–2009), widow of Renato Angiolillo (1901–1973), founder of the newspaper Il Tempo; her art collection, sold in London, Christie's, 15.VII.2010, included a pastel boy by J. W. Hien (Lot 600).

Charles-Claude Flahaut de La Billarderie, comte d'ANGIVILLER (1730–1809), directeur-général des Bâtiments 1774. The second comtesse, née Adélaïde-Émilie Filleul (1761–1836), owned a pastel by Labille-Guiard (Brizard) in 1783.

Lit.: Grove 1996; Rosenberg 2007; Procès-verbaux

Edmund ANTROBUS (–1787), of New Street, Spring Gardens, collector. He was the son of Edmund Antrobus of Odrode, and cousin of the first baronet. His house was "very splendidly furnished with books and pictures", according to Romney's friend, William Hayley. He died unmarried. London, Fenner & Wilkins, 1.II.1788, Lot 60, 62: pastels by Rosalba of Lord Huntingdon and Mr Grimes

Arthur APPLEBY (1895–1966) and his brother Richard traded from 27 William IV Street, Trafalgar Square and later 10 Ryder Street, specialising in early English watercolours. In the 1970s Arthur's son John Appleby (1929–2009) moved to Jersey, and assembled a varied collection of old master pictures, including a Titian, as well as travel and natural history. The collection was sold after his death by Christie's in a series of sales, notably on 4.XI.2010. Pastels handled by the firm included works by Russell, Hamilton, Cotes and Allais.

Friedrich Julius "Fritz" ARNDT (1856–1919), of Oberwartha, according to one source the grandson of Johann Heinrich Schmidt, had a number of his pastels c.1905.

Madeleine-Sophie ARNOULD (1744–1802), cantatrice de l'Opéra. The celebrated actress, herself the subject of a rich iconography including pastels by Desangles, Hoin, La Tour and Vigée Le Brun, was also a collector of pictures, objets d'art, porcelain etc. A sale took place in Paris, hôtel d'Aligre, under Chariot and Paillet, with the catalogue printed as a supplement to the Charles Natoire posthumous sale of 14.XII.1778 & seq., but the Arnould sale was postponed until 30–31.XII.1778; both parts of the catalogue were illustrated by Saint-Aubin.

Le chevalier d'AUFREY (fl. Toulouse 1784–91): sent numerous pastels to the Salon de Toulouse between 1784 and 1791. "D'Aufrey, chevalier de Malte" was an associé honoraire of the Académie de Toulouse from 1768, and a modérateur 1776–79, while "le chevalier d'Aufrey" was nominated in 1788. The former was Pierre-Clément Carrière-d'Aufrey (–1806), chevalier de Malte 1755, chargé d'affaires de l'Ordre de Malte dans le Grand Prieuré de Toulouse; the latter was his younger brother Henri-Marie de Carrière, dit chevalier d'Aufrey (1736–1813), chevalier de Saint-Louis, capitaine au régiment de Vivarais-Infanterie, but described as "peu fortuné" in the Revolutionary tribunal. Their eldest brother was abbé Jacques-Henri de Carrière d'Aufrey (1724–1786), conseiller au parlement de Toulouse, secrétaire perpétuel de l'Académie de Toulouse and well-known author.

He was the son and grandson of eminent doctors, and it was his maternal grandfather Jean Fabas who formed a major collection of over 200 mainly Dutch paintings in the 1820s. Dr Azam lent three pastels (two by Perronneau and a Rosalba) to the Bordeaux 1882 exhibition; one was in his sale p.m., Paris, Drouot, Baudoin, 15.XII.1909.

Giovanni AZZAVEDI (–1667), commediografo, piazza Pasquino, Rome. His inventory (12.I.1668) included a dozen sheets by Padovanino described as pastels; they were portraits of "beauties", noble ladies, chosen, with their ebony and gilt frames, to decorate his library.

Carl Philipp Emanuel BACH (1714–1788): the composer, second son of Johann Sebastian, was an avid collector of portraits of musicians. A substantial collection was catalogued in his estate inventory, printed in 1790; in addition to the pastels it lists (below) several other pastels probably belonged to him. Coloured chalk drawings by artists such as Hardirch were also included. The attribution of the Meiningen pastel of his father remains controversial. Several of his letters, notably that of 20.IV.1774 to his father's biographer Johann Nicolaus Forkel, discuss pastels (which he called "dry colours"), the difficulty of transporting them to be copied, and the portrait made by Reifenstein.

Louis-Guillaume BAILLET, baron de SAINT-JULIEN (1726–1795), poet, salon critic and collector. He was the son of a conseiller au parlement de Dijon. D'Hémery noted him as the author of bad verses. He was a particular enthusiast for the naturalistic style of Chardin and La Tour, and was the dedicatee of a Dutch Fête de campagne engraved by Dequevauviller in 1777. He is not to be confused with François-David Bollioud de Saint-Julien (1713–1788), receveur general du clergé de France.

Wilhems, Baron van BAERLL (–1781), conseiller de commerce du roi de Pologne, rue Louis-le-Grand, Paris; collector. He died in Spa, leaving a will naming his widow, Mme Mitterstille, their children (a son was in the Gardes), and his sister Ida, veuve van den Eertwegh. The identification of the vendor in his posthumous sale is taken from a manuscript annotation, and appears in secondary sources as "baron de Vanbaal" or "Van Balle".

William BAKER (1743–1824), of Bayfordbury, MP. In addition to the Kneller Kit-Cat portraits inherited from Jacob Tonson through William's wife Mary, portraits by Reynolds, etc., the Bakers owned a Faithorne pastel of Milton (now in Princeton) and two John Russell pastels which descended in the family until sold in 2001.

La présidente de BANDEVILLE, née Marie-Anne-Catherine Bigot de Graveron (1709–1787), veuve de Pierre-François Doublet, marquis de Bandedville (1705–1761): she acquired several pastels at the Jullienne sale in 1767, including works by Barocci, Boucher and Rosalba. She purchased at other sales, such as the de Selle sale where she bought a pastel by Audran through Remy. Her natural history collection was one of the most important of the day; she bequeathed it (testament AN mc/lxxvi/415), together with a number of pictures, the usufruct of her house at Passy and an annuity of 3000 livres to the abbe Gruel (g.r.).

Pietro BARBARIGO (1711–1801), detto lo Zoppo, collezionista. The inventory of his collection, 11.I.1804, included 8 pastels by Rosalba (three members of the Darcy of Holderness family; contessa Simonetta; an autoritratto; a Diana; and two other female portraits).
Lit.: Tormen 2009, p. 246f

Sigismond BARDAC (1856–1919), banker, of Russian origin. René Gimpel bought some of Sigismond's collection two years before his death; the major sale was in 1920. Sigismond's wife Emma Moÿse (1862–1934) was Faure's muse (their daughter Dolly inspired the suite); after her divorce in 1905, she married Debussy. Sigismond's brothers Noël (born 1849 in Odessa) and Joseph (1854–1941) were also collectors; Joseph's sale was held in 1927. In addition to the six pastels in his 1920 sale, Sigismond Bardac also donated a pastel by Colson to a charity auction in .IV.1917. In May 1919, presumably immediately after Bardac's death on 4.V.1919, Féral conducted an expertise of the collection at 39 avenue Victor-Emmanuel-III; this included a further La Tour masque d'homme, préparation of which no other trace is known.

Alexander BARKER (1802–1873), of 103 Piccadilly, London, art dealer. His extensive collections were sold at auction by Christie's, 6.VI.1874 and included a number of paintings now in the National Gallery, among them Piero's Nativity. He handled a pastel by Boucher.

Pierre-François-Paulin, comte de BARRAL (1745–1822), chevalier de Malte 1747, baron de l'Empire 1810, himself the subject of a pastel at the age of 3½, a notorious libertine; he kept in the château d'Allevard "[une] quantité innombrable de portraits [...] représentant de fort jolies femmes, traitées à la façon de Boucher, en costume de nymphes, de bergères ou de déesses... exécutées au pastel."

Sir Sydney BARRATT (1898–1975), chemist, industrialist and collector, who acquired Crowe Hall, Bath in 1961. A posthumous sale took place in London, Christie's, 16.XII.2010, and included a pastel by Russell (Lady Hill).

Paul BARROILHET (1810–1871), of 68 rue Blanche, opera singer and collector. "On l'a vu réunir et vendre à plusieurs reprises des collections assez curieuses" (Grand Larousse, 1867, p. 267f); this included a number of paintings by Chardin. According to the Annuaire des artistes et amateurs, 1861, his collection numbered some 250 items. But he evidently made frequent disposals, such as in the 1856 sale of 75 of his pictures. The catalogue was provided with an introduction by Théophile Gautier; a letter from Barroilhet to Gautier (Correspondence générale, 1991, VI, no. 2297) of 19.II.1856 identified some 14 of the best, including pastels by La Tour and Vivien. Couture's portrait of the singer is in the Fogg Museum.

Rev. Sir Henry BATE DUDLEY, Bt (1745–1824), newspaper editor and supporter of Gainsborough. Two pastel landscapes by the artist, now in the Tate, were donated by Bate Dudley's nephew Thomas Birch Wolfe.

John, 2nd Viscount BATEMAN (1721–1802) had Somerset House, Park Lane built in 1769; twenty years later he sold it to Warren Hastings, and mentioned this in a letter of 6.VI.1789 to Ozias Humphry (Royal Academy of Arts archive, HU/4/32). He is presumably the Bateman who on 10.VII.1772 (HU/1/116) wrote to Ozias Humphries [sic] to say that he thought Humphry's drawing of an old man the finest thing he has seen, but that he would like his Rosalba drawing back.

Nicolas BEAUJON (1712–1786), négociant à Bordeaux et Paris, secrétaire du roi 1766, directeur de la Caisse d'escompte 1767, conseiller d'État 1769. His vast wealth was founded on manipulating the grain market in Bordeaux, and later in life he atoned by endowing the Hospice Beaujon, to be decorated with a portrait by Vigée Le Brun. In 1773 he acquired Mme de Pompadour's hôtel d'Evreux (now the Élysée palace) for 1 million livres, and here he displayed his extraordinary art collection included Holbein's Ambassadors; two Rembrandts; five Rubens; a remarkable series of Dutch pictures by Metsu Van Ostade, Hals, Wouwermann, Van de Velde, Wenix etc., as well as pictures by old and modern French masters. He is widely confused with Voltaire's correspondent, who was secrétaire du prince de Carignan from 1733, and was intéressé dans les fourrages pour l'armée (n. La Tour documents, 3.VII.1738).

Pierre-Jacques-Onézime [ou Onésyme] BERGERET (1715–1785), receveur général des finances, trésorier-honoraire de l'ordre de Saint-Louis, honoraire-associé libre 1754, honoraire amateur 1774 de l'Académie royale de peinture, friend and collector of Fragonard. Modern sources often give him the surname “de Grancourt”, a title that was used by his uncle and later by his son; but he did not use it in contemporary documents.

Georges BERNHEIM (1893–1963), Paris dealer. A gallery opened in the rue du Faubourg Saint-Honoré in 1928 with an exhibition of Miró. He was also recorded at 40 rue de la Boétie, 25 avenue Foch, Paris. In 1932 he moved to a new building which he had constructed at 3 rue Dosne. The stock was seized in 1940 by the ERR.

François-Joachim de Pierre, cardinal de BERNIS (1715–1794). Born to a noble but poor family in Nîmes, he was educated at Louis-le-Grand and Saint-Sulpice. He came to attention through his licentious verse, for which he won a seat at the Académie française in 1744, becoming a protégé of Mme de Pompadour. This led to his appointment as ambassador to Venice in 1751. On his return he was appointed ministre des affaires étrangères (1757), but he fell from grace the following year. In 1764 he was appointed archbishop of Albi, and five years later was made a cardinal and French ambassador to the Holy See. His collection was seized in the Revolution: a manuscript catalogue (repr. Lamouzele 1909) from 1793 included some 126 items, valued at 10,906 livres. Many of the works, including several pastels, are now in the musée des Augustins, Toulouse.

Marcel BERNSTEIN (1840–1896), 47 avenue d'Éléna, a Jewish financier, diamond merchant and oil magnate of Polish origin, and his wife, née Ida Seligman (1854–1921), daughter of a Franco-American banker of Bavarian origin; she was a cousin of the Guggenheims. They owned two Russell pastels (Mrs Jordan; Mrs O'Shea) 1894–1924. Manet made a portrait of their 5-year old son, the playwright Henri Bernstein (1876–1953). A cousin of Charles Ephrussi, Henri Bernstein became editor of the Journal des débats.

Federico BEROALDI (–1694), conte e cavaliere dei SS. Maurizio e Lazzaro, Bologna; inv. p.m., 15.I.1695:

Albert-Paul-Lucien BERTHEL (1878–1955), picture, print and antiquarian book dealer in London (32 Museum Street c.1918; 39–41 New Oxford Street later). An anarchist and pornographer in his youth, he was sentenced to one year in prison by the Belgian courts in 1905, perhaps explaining his move to England. He handled a “Perronneau”, several copies of pastels by Liotard and a pastel group portrait said to be by Liotard, perhaps by Pougin de Saint-Aubin.

Samuel Reading BERTRON (1865–1938), of 935 5th Avenue, New York and Roslyn, Long Island, senior partner of the banking firm of Bertron, Griscom & Co., 40 Wall Street. He was vice-president of the War Relief Clearing House for France and her allies. His role in international diplomacy, such as the peace negotiations between Italy and Turkey, led to his being decorated by Belgium, France (Légion d'honneur, 1920), Italy and Romania. He was involved in support for the early Soviet Russia. A friend of Woodrow Wilson and the Roosevelts, he was also a client of René Gimpel, from whom he bought his pictures: "il n'acheta qu'à moi". He lent four pastels to the Metropolitan Museum's 50th anniversary exhibition in 1920; the Perronneau and La Tour were still shown in the Met. in a 1924 guidebook. A few years later, Bertron's firm got into serious financial difficulties and he had to dispose of the collection, returning some unpaid items to Gimpel and Wildenstein.

Paul Albert BESNARD (1849–1934), pastellist, was born into a family of artists. Trained at the École des Beaux-Arts, he won the grand prix de Rome in 1874, and went on to develop a personal style influenced by impressionism. His many honours included membership of the Académie française. He provided the introduction to Georges Wildenstein's La Tour, 1928.

William Ponsonby, Viscount Duncannon, from 1758 2nd Earl of BESSBOROUGH (1704–1793), politician and art collector, a member of the Society of Dilettanti and of the Accademia di Disegno in Florence, and a trustee of the British Museum from 1768. Best known as the patron of Liotard, with whom he travelled to the Levant in 1738, his enthusiasm for the artist's work led to his buying pastel copies by Arthur Pond of Liotard's Turkish woman and Turkish woman with girl, 1745-46; and in 1748 Pond did a pastel of his wife, née Lady Caroline Cavendish (1719–1760), whom he had married in 1739. Bessborough also owned pastels by Rosalba. A drawing by Bessborough of Castel Gandolfo was in Milton in 1800 (Gibson 1800, p. 205). Liotard wrote to Bessborough in 1763 mentioning Jurine as someone who could fix pastels, and he was cited as a satisfied client in an advertisement for Jurine's method of fixing crayons in the Gazetteer & new daily advertiser, 28.I.1765. His son Frederick, 3rd Earl of Bessborough (1758–1844) inherited financial difficulties, exacerbated by the gambling debts of his wife, Lady Henrietta Spencer, and the picture collection was disposed of in several sales in 1848 and 1850. A number of pictures were sold by Christie's in 1891. The contents of Bessborough House in Ireland were sold by Christie's in 1901. The sale of Claude A. Ponsonby, one of Bessborough's great-great-grandsons, included five Liotards (London, Christie's, 28.III.1908). In 1924 the family acquired Stansted Park (v. Museums).

Julien BESSONNEAU (1842–1916) industrialised the family hemp and rope-making business Bessonneau Angers into a major enterprise which finally closed in 1966. He was also involved in the Cie Anjou Aéronautique.

The collection of old master and modern pictures auctioned in 1954 is from a subsequent generation, his adopted son, the député Julien Bessonneau (1880–1960). The Perronneau included in the 1954 sale appears however to have been consigned by one of the "divers amateurs".

Dr Theodore Deodatus Nathaniel BESTERMAN (1904–1976), bibliographer, publisher, expert on Voltaire and psychic research. He established the musée Voltaire in Les Délices, later returning to England where he established the Voltaire Foundation. He owned pastels by Knapton (Pope) and Gardner.

Jean BEURDELEY (1772–1853), a soldier under Napoléon, opened a magasin de curiosités in Paris, moving in 1830 to the Pavillon de Hanovre, 28 boulevard des Italiens which remained the firm's premises until 1894. His son Louis-Auguste-Alfred Beurdeley (1808–1882) was both a dealer in antiques and objets d'art as well as an ébéniste of distinction, numbering Napoleon III and Eugénie among his clients. His illegitimate son Alfred II-Emmanuel Louis Beurdeley (1847–1919) managed the firm from 1875 until his retirement in 1895, when he devoted himself entirely to his prodigious collections housed at his hôtel in the rue de Clichy. He amassed over 1300 drawings, 28,000 prints as well as furniture and an important collection of Chinese porcelain, later dispersed in numerous sales from 1905 to 1920. He left Fr25,000 to the musée des Arts décoratifs in Paris.

Georges BEYER (1756–1819), physicien, ingénieur, pupil and collaborator of Franklin, inventor of the fortepiano à cordes de verre, collector and owner of a renowned cabinet de physique in Paris. His parents, François, a meunier, and Catherine Marchal, were from Algrange, Moselle. The (uncatalogued) sale of goods which took place in the rue de Richelieu reported in Le Constitutionnel, 8.v.1817, p. 3 as after his death was in fact after that of his wife, Marie-Jeanne-Françoise Robert (–1816); it included Pigalle's bust of Voltaire modelled at Ferney. It is unclear if the Ducreux pastel of Franklin which he owned was in that sale. Beyer's own death was on 17.1.1819 aged 63 (Journal du commerce, 11.ii.1819 p. 44); his nephew Jean-François Mérot, mécanicien, 62 rue de Vaugirard, was his légataire universel. Neither the Ducreux nor any other pastel was listed in his inv. p.m., and had presumably been sold in 1817.

Harry BEYER (–2012), antiques dealer, Salvatorstraße, Munich. He bequeathed his collections, including pictures, Fabergé etc. to the Bayerische Museum in Munich; unwanted items were sold by Ketterer Kunst, 15.v.2013 and included a pastel possibly by Darbes.

Jacques-Claude de BÈZE de Lys (1713–1775), conseiller au parlement de Paris; he married Marie-Thérèse Dezallier d'Argenville, daughter of Antoine-Joseph (q.v.). Dupuy-Vachey 2017 suggests that the M. de Bèze, Bessy or Bissy noted in Hall's inventaire was the architect Claude-Guillaume Debesse (–a.1786).

Guillaume de Gontaut-Biron, marquis de BIRON (1859–1939), of Paris, later Geneva, collector, particularly of French and Italian drawings; he also had a particular interest in frames. Son of Élie, vicomte de Gontaut (1817–1890), ambassadeur de France à Berlin in the 1870s; Biron's sister, Marie de Gontaut-Biron (1847–) married, in 1876, Archambaud, 3^e marquis de Talleyrand; his nephew Hélié, 7^e duc de Talleyrand (1882–1968), inherited his uncle's collection of drawings by Tiepolo and Guardi, furniture and ceramics. Heinrich Reichsgraf von BRÜHL (1700–1763), kursächsische Premierminister; amassed a vast collection of pictures, sculpture, porcelain, natural history specimens and books. Visiting Graf Brühl's palace in Dresden during his tour of Germany c.1749, Thomas Nugent noted the “drawing-room, empannelled with looking-glasses, adorned with rich paintings” and the separate “cabinet furnished with enamels and crayons”. After his death Catherine II acquired his collection of works on paper - some 1076 drawings and 31,569 prints - together with some 600 of his paintings. Part of his collection, including pastels by Angelica Le Gru Perotti, was sold in London, Christie's, 23–24.III.1770.

Two pastels by Perronneau, baron P. de L and a petite fille, 1758, are thought to have belonged to the family.

Paul de Cayeux de Sénarpoint, dit Cailleux (1884–1964) founded Galerie CAILLEUX, Paris in 1912. From the beginning the focus was on the French XVIII^e. An exhibition, Choix de pastels français du XVIII^e siècle, was held from the tiny premises in the rue Laffitte in 1923. That year the firm moved to 136 faubourg Saint-Honoré where it remained for more than 75 years. Paul’s son Jean and granddaughter Marianne Roland Michel (1936–2004) continued the business and also published widely on the French eighteenth century. Jean and his sister Denise Mégret donated a Ducreux pastel to the Louvre in 1949. The Fondation Marianne & Roland Michel opened a centre de documentation in 2005 and presents an annual prize for the publication of manuscripts.

Le docteur François-Marie-Gustave-Émile CAMUS (1829–1892), a physician of repute from Dijon, gave up his profession completely to devote himself to his passion for making ornamental bronzes in the 18th century style. He knew Manet and Burty, but was dismissed by Goncourt (1874) as a "petit homme très vulgaire, ayant une passion de maniaque pour la porcelaine de Saxe, les statuettes et les figurines pâlement rosées." He was also an early enthusiast for japonerie. He and his wife, née Jeanne-Marie-Blanche Dumoustier de Frédyilly (1839-), were portrayed by Degas. He owned pastels by Hall (Robert) and La Tour (homme) which he lent to exhibitions in 1883.

CAROLINE LUISE Markgräfin von Baden (1723–1783), amateur pastellist and collector. Her posthumous Teilungsinventar documented the division of her collection between her three sons, Karl Ludwig, Friedrich and Ludwig (see Lauts 1984). The lack of detail makes it very difficult to interpret the inventory, which, among numerous art objects, lists (in a separate section) some 100 pastels (set out below), including unfinished sheets etc., some of which may be from Caroline Luise's own hand. Almost all are unattributed. Others may include the celebrated Galerie des Beautés, nine pastel portraits commissioned from Boucher c.1760, among them Mmes Skjoldbrand, van Höpken, de Pompadour. The original orthography and abbreviations are preserved (e.g. Dchl: appears for Durchlaucht; Serenißima is Caroline Luise). Karlsruhe 2015 (pp. 276–83) contains the "Melling-Inventar" carried out a year after the owner's death: it lists the collection by location and mixes pastels with other objects. It appears that the objects in the two inventories are separate.

Carpentier, v. Le Carpentier

Francis Culling CARR-GOMM, né Carr (1834–1919), of the Madras civil service and Farnham Royal, Buckinghamshire, married (as his second wife) Emily, the niece of Field-Marshal Sir William Maynard Gomm (1784–1875), and assumed the additional name by royal licence in 1878. He edited Gomm's letters and wrote a book about Rotherhithe Manor, which his wife inherited from her uncle. He was chairman of the London Hospital, and launched an appeal for funds for Joseph Merrick, the "Elephant Man". Two Russell pastels left by Martha Goldsworthy to her companion, Sir William Gomm's aunt, passed to his son Hubert (1877–1939), the Liberal politician and publisher, but most of the collection, acquired from Sir William's widow, Dame Elizabeth Ann Kerr (–1877), granddaughter of the 5th Marquess of Lothian, were presented for sale at Christie's in 1914 as the "Gomm collection" following the passing of the Gomm Heirlooms Act 1913. It included old master paintings and early English drawings as well as two pastels.

Paul CASSIRER (1871–1926), Berlin art dealer, writer and publisher, specialising in Van Gogh, Cézanne and the artists of the Berlin Secession. The firm of Paul Cassirer & Hugo Helbing continued: two months after Cassirer's suicide it conducted an important sale of pictures from the Graf Brühl and the Saxon royal collections.

Jean-Bruno CASTEL, dit Bruno de Castel (1700–1782), trésorier de France, one of the founders of the Académie de peinture de Toulouse. He inherited some pictures from his cousin Joseph Colomès. He lent pastels by Despax to the Salon de Toulouse in 1752. These reappeared in his posthumous sale in 1783.
Toulouse, 7.I.1783:
Lots 20–21: Un portrait au Pastel, d'après Santerre, par M. Despax.

Boni de CASTELLANE (1867–1932), well known society figure and his wife, Anna Gould; their son was comte Georges de Castellane (1897–1944) who married Florinda Fernández y Anchorena. Their daughter Diane married the prince de Poix. A photograph of the Salon bleu in the hôtel de Castries in the catalogue of Diane de Castellane's sale of furniture (Monaco, Christie's, 2.VII.1995) showed a Perronneau pastel (not in the sale); it, and another Perronneau pastel, appeared in Paris, Christie's, 7.III.2017.

Anne-Claude-Philippe, comte de CAYLUS (1692–1765), honoraire amateur de l'Académie royale de peinture 1731, celebrated connoisseur, amateur engraver, antiquarian and author. In 1759 he inherited the estates of his uncle Claude-Abraham, but he seems not to have used the title of duc de Caylus, which passed in turn to a cousin, Achille-Joseph de Robert, marquis de Lignerac, 2e duc de Caylus (c.1733–1783). A catalogue of the collections published in 1772 contains items and descriptions that do not precisely match those in the 1773 sale (e.g. the sizes of the La Tour pastels were repeated apparently in error in 1772; other discrepancies suggest the inclusion of the frames in the 1772 sizes).

included the comtesse de Ganay and the marquise de Juigné). The marquise owned a La Tour pastel (Mlle Gaussin) in 1885.

CHARLES-ALEXANDRE de Lorraine (1712–1780), “le prince Charles”, archiduc d'Autriche, gouverneur des Pays-Bas, Staatholder of the Austrian Netherlands, was also an avid art collector and patron. The bulk of his estate was left to his nephew, Joseph II., and is now in Vienna. Six major sales took place after his death, notably that of 14–15.I.1782 where among the 750 works some pastels are mentioned without details. The posthumous inventory includes 19 pastels no doubt including some by Liotard.

Giovanni Giorgio CHECHEL DI CHECHELSPERG, cavaliere del Sacro Romano Impero, recte Johann Georg Kechel (fl. Venice 1695–1718), drawings collector, Venice, from whom Crozat (q.v.) bought a number of pastel heads by Barocci; he is referred to by Crozat as the friend of Zanetti, in a letter to Rosalba Carriera (28.x.1718). Considerable confusion surrounds this improbably spelt name (variants are Chelchelsberg, Chechelberg). He was the German resident in Venice (recorded as consul from 1695), and a member of a family that had held this position for over 100 years. Gasparo Chechel, presumably his father, was also an art collector, owning mainly Flemish paintings according to his 1657 inventory. Giorgio Chechel seems to have acquired some of his collection from Feldmarschall Johann Matthias von der Schulenburg. Giorgio's son Gaspar also seems to have played an important role in the Fondaco de Tedeschi in Venice, and also collected drawings. Giorgio's grandson, by his daughter Caterina Pezzana, married Elisabeth Le Blond, daughter of the French consul and probably sister of the subject of Rosalba's pastel.

Étienne-François, duc de CHOISEUL (1719–1785), soldier, ambassador and statesman, was also a major art collector. His acquisitions started before his marriage in 1750 to the heiress of the Crozat fortune, but it was during the period 1758–70 after his return to Paris that most of his purchases were made, at public sales (e.g. Jullienne, 1767) and privately. A number of pastel portraits were made of Choiseul and his family - Roslin's pastel of his sister Béatrice de Gramont is visible in the famous Choiseul box, but none is listed in the 1772 sale. The collection was dispersed after his disgrace in 1770. His cousin, the comte de Choiseul-Gouffier (1752–1817), author of the Voyage pittoresque de la Grèce, was an honoraire-associé libre de l'Académie royale 1782. Part of his collection descended to the princesse de Faucigny-Lucinge (q.v.).

Maurice COTTIER (1822–1881), château de Cangé près de Tours, painter and collector. In 1856 he married Jenny Conquéré de Monbrison (1806–1873), sister of George de Monbrison (q.v.). With his nephew Edouard André (husband of Nélie Jacquemart), he bought the Gazette des beaux-arts in 1872. He was active in many art committees, and participated in numerous exhibitions. He lent a La Tour pastel to Paris 1874b; by 1888 it belonged to his wife's nephew.

Jean COTTIN (1709–1781), banquier, place Louis-le-Grand, directeur de la Cie des Indes, a cousin of Beaumarchais, from the Protestant family in Saint-Quentin; he married a Fromaget, and his brother-in-law Étienne Fromaget was a friend of La Tour. His fortune was estimated at his death at c.1 million livres. His collection, of nearly 1000 lots, included paintings, drawings, prints, enamels and miniatures, and some 142 portraits, classified separately. His son Jean-Jacques Cottin de La Thuillierie was portrayed by Liotard, while the elder son Jean-Louis Cottin, régisseur des vivres de la Marine, administrateur de la caisse d'escompte, died in London in 1792; the latter's son Jean-André-Henry was connected with the pastellist Mlle Davril.

Edmond COULON, sgr de La Grange-aux-Bois (1704–1787), chevalier de Saint-Michel, grand-maître des Eaux et forêts, collectionneur. In 1730, at Charleville-Mézières, he married 1730 Marie-Angélique Dubois du Miret (1705–1812). They were based in the Ardennes and at Strasbourg, where Huin probably portrayed his wife; Vigée Le Brun made a pastel of his son Jean-Baptiste, a mousquetaire and his successor at the Eaux et forêts. According to the memoirs of his great-granddaughter Angélique de Rémont, baronne Vast Vimeux, “M. Edmond Coulon possédait une grande fortune dont il vivait noblement. Il aimait les artistes et avait réuni au château de la Grange aux Bois une collection de fort belles choses, beaucoup de tableaux, entre autres, un pastel attribué à Quentin de Latour représentant le régent Philippe d'Orléans en Bacchus couronné de raisins et de pampres, une coupe pleine à la main, puis un tableau de Pater représentant une fille villageoise, sujet que le peintre avait traité deux fois car Mme de Courval a le semblable.” The “La Tour” is probably the pastel J.77.377 of an inconnu now attributed to Vivien.

Rev. James Hector de COURCELLES (1838–1930) lent a pastel by Opie (Wolau) to the Paris 1911 exhibition. He was the son of an organ builder, plain John Courcelle, and initially taught music before taking a degree at Worcester College, Oxford as a mature student. He was rector of Ardrossan 1874–77 but held no office after 1891, living on independent means at 24 Arundel Gardens, Notting Hill.

Auguste COURTIN (1825–1875), illegitimate son of the grammarian Charles-Pierre Chapsal. He inherited the château de Poulangis, became maire de Joinville-le-Port in 1856 and was a member of various scientific and charitable societies.

Quintin CRAUFURD (1743–1819), of Scottish descent, made his fortune with the East India Company, returning to Europe in 1780 where, after travels in Italy, Germany and Holland, he settled in Paris with his companion Anna Eleonora Franchi, known as la belle Sullivan. After the Revolution he formed a collection of portraits of illustrious persons, mainly from the reign of Louis XIV. A small group of pastels, gouaches and miniatures also appeared in his first posthumous sale, which took place at his hôtel de Créquy, rue d'Anjou-Saint-Honoré; copies of the catalogue were also distributed in London. A sale of pictures and historical portraits after the death of Mme Veuve Craufurd took place at her home, 21 rue d'Anjou-Saint-Honoré, in 1824.

Anselme-Alphonse CRIGNON DE MONTIGNY (1812–1877), conseiller d'État, politician from Orléans, whose vast medal collection was dispersed on his death (Paris, 1–6.III.1880). His son, Anselme-Guy-Gaston (1847–1898), officier du génie, had no interest at the time, but soon afterwards became fatally ill, and decided to devote his remaining years to reassembling his father's collection. The 1899 sale that took place shortly after the Gaston's death included a group of miniatures as well as large numbers of coins, medals, cameos and intaglios, but only one pastel.

François-Ernest CRONIER (1840–1905) [Crosnier in many sources]. Of humble origins, Cronier was trained as an engineer at the École polytechnique; his talents were spotted early by the French sugar magnate, Henri Say. Cronier rose to be managing director of the firm and after Say's death trustee of his estate. He also founded the Sucreries d'Égypte. The vast Say fortune was estimated at up to Fr100 million; Say's widow lived in a mansion on the Champs-Élysées, while Cronier and his family bought an important house on the rue de Lisbonne. He acquired French and English 18th century portraits, as well as paintings by Watteau and Fragonard, from Gimpel and others during the period 1898 until his suicide in .VIII.1905 following the failure of his speculations on the sugar market. Acting in concert with Jaluzot, founder of the Printemps department store, they used the Say estate to take an enormous long position which proved disastrous when the price of sugar halved. Criminal proceedings against Jaluzot commenced, while Cronier took cyanide and simultaneously shot himself. The posthumous sale in 1905 does not include all his collection, as he occasionally made exchanges (he acquired a pastel child by Russell from Gimpel in 1899). The sale, which yielded Fr5,198,031, contained important pictures by Fragonard and Chardin, and attracted much attention at the time: "Exposition Cronier où tout Paris se rue", according to Marguerite de Saint-Marceau in her Journal, although Gide noted in his "Toute cette collection sent un peu le mignonnaire."

Antoine CROZAT de Préserville (1630–1690), banker from Toulouse. His two sons, Antoine II Crozat du Châtel (1655–1738) and Pierre Crozat "le pauvre" (1661–1740), moved to Paris in 1703. While Antoine continued to increase his vast fortune through international trade, Pierre's attention was concentrated on legendary art collection, including some 400 paintings and 18,000 drawings at his hôtel in the rue de Richelieu. Part of the collection was sold after his death for the benefit of the poor; some of these sheets were acquired by the duc d'Orléans. The paintings were inherited by his nephew Louis-François Crozat, marquis du Châtel (1691–1750); after his death, the sculptures were sold at auction in 1751, while the paintings were divided between his children. Those of the sons were subsequently acquired by Louis-Antoine Crozat de Thiers, place Vendôme (himself an amateur draughtsman). After his death in 1770, the collection was sold to Diderot as agent for Catherine II, and is now in the Hermitage. The act of sale (AN MC/MI/RS/517, 4.I.1772) includes a catalogue of "tableaux, pastels et dessins" running to 39 pages; the total price was 460,000 livres. Catherine II also acquired a number of pictures from the estate of the marquis du Châtel's daughter, the duchesse de Choiseul. A group of pastels by Wallerant Vaillant were said to have been acquired from Crozat by prince Galitzin (q.v.).

[50 livres; Gouvernet] Frederic Baroche d'Urbain

Cette collection de Dessains du Baroque, est extrêmement précieuse. M. Crozat en a apporté d'Urbain les principaux Dessains; quant aux Têtes en pastel qui sont d'une beauté singulière, & telles qu'on les devoit attendre d'un Peintre qui marchoit de fort près sur les traces du Corregge, il les trouva à Venise chez M. Chechelberg. Cet amateur qui en connoissoit le prix, les avoit toujours conservé sous des glaces. Au reste, ces Dessains confirment ce qu'on dit les Auteurs, des précautions singulières que prenoit le Baroque pour conduire ses ouvrages au point de la perfection; car les Etudes pour un même tableau y sont multipliées de telle sorte, qu'on n'imagine pas qu'un homme ait pu avoir la constance de pousser aussi loin le travail

Lot 246: Un grand Dessain du Baroque, représentant Jesus-Christ porté au tombeau: c'est sur ce beau Dessain qui est d'un fini & d'une conservation parfaite, qu'a été gravée l'Estampe de Gilles Sadeler [100 livres 1 sol; Hecquet p. Mariette]

Lot 247: Deux grands & beaux Dessains du même Maître; l'un représentant Jesus-Christ descendu de dessus la Croix, & l'autre S. François recevant les Stigmates: le premier est une très-belle Esquisse pour le tableau; & l'autre a servi à Villamene pour graver sa planche [30 livres; Tessin]

Lot 249: Sept grands Dessains du Baroque, dont quatre de Pâisages [10 livres 1 sol; Agard]

Le Guide [Guido Reni]

Lot 525: [MS addition: et une teste en pastel]

Jacques & François Bassan

Si le Bassan s'étoit contenté de faire des Dessains, il ne jouiroit pas de la réputation qu'il s'est acquise; ses Dessains tons indécis qu'ils sont, accusent cependant, il faut l'avouer, de la couleur, & c'est ce qui les fait rechercher.

Lot 704: Vingt Dessains, dont l'Etude d'une femme portant son enfant, en pastel [42 livres; Noury]

Henri CRUSE (1861–1944), wine grower in Bordeaux, and his wife, née Georgina de Luze, donated a pastel by Perronneau (Majence de Camiran) to the musée des Beaux-Arts de Bordeaux in 1924. In 1920 Cruse and his brother Frédéric (1854–1933) donated an oil portrait of Tourny par Allais to the same museum. Henri also owned a group of portraits from Wertmuller's Bordeaux period.

Mrs Alan Percy CUNLIFFE, née Malvina Virginia Longfellow (1889–1962), of South Street, Mayfair, American film actress. Her bequest to the V&A in 1963 included three pastels as well as a group of miniatures and a collection of English silver. Sales of Chinese porcelain and other items took place in London, Sotheby's, 7.V.1963.

Johan Christian DAHL (1788–1857), Norwegian landscape painter based in Dresden; he lent numerous pastels to the Dresden exhibitions in the 1840s, among them works by Vogel, Schmidt, Mengs and Oudry.

Joseph-Honoré-Désiré DAIGREMONT (1790–1866), inspecteur général des fortifications. His broad ranging collections were dispersed in a series of sales from 1861. Not to be confused with the miniaturist Louis-Narcisse Jacops, marquis d'Aigremont (Lille 1768–1829). A pastel of his father Octave-Joseph Daigremont was copied by the collector's nephew, Alexandre Daigremont, also in pastel (Bordeaux, Blanchy, Lacombe, 3.IV.2024, Lot 242); the ambiguous label on the back may suggest that the original was by or simply belonged to him.

David DAVID-WEILL (1871–1952), président du Conseil des musées, major collector and donor to the Louvre, the musée Carnavalet, the musée Antoine Lécuyer and The Metropolitan Museum of Art. He was born in San Francisco and spent 13 years in the USA before his family returned to France. After the Lycée Condorcet, he joined the banking firm Lazard Frères owned by his uncles in the 1890s, and married Flora Raphael in 1897. His interests ranged from paintings and miniatures to oriental art and antiquities - some of which appear in a Vuillard portrait of him. During the war some of the collection was seized by the ERR; pastels included a Greuze jeune fille and a Nanteuil, Hardouin. After his death, his collection of miniatures was split into two groups, one given to the Louvre and the other bought by Wildenstein and sold complete to Sir Charles Clore. David-Weill's philanthropic tradition was continued by his grandson Michel David-Weill

Henry DAWKINS (1698–1744) of Clarendon, Jamaica, made his fortune from sugar plantations in Jamaica. His eldest son, James Dawkins (1722–1757), started his Grand Tour in 1744 when he inherited his father's estates; he developed an interest in archaeology, and collected pictures; apart from his own portrait, he commissioned a set of the Seasons from Rosalba. His brother Henry, the subject of a pastel by La Tour, was admitted to the Society of Dilettanti on the strength of James's celebrity. Their pictures descended to Henry's grandson, the Rev. Edward Henry (1794–1859), of Morhanger House, near Sandy, Bedfordshire; Fellow of All Souls, vicar of West Markham, Nottinghamshire, 1828; ∞ 1835 Elizabeth Cooper. The collection passed to their son Edward Henry Frederick Dawkins (1837–1912) before the 1913 sale.

Mme Éléonore DÈCLE, née Alexandrine Leclanché (1808–1896), from a distinguished family of scientists, she married a négociant from Paris in 1825. Her brother Léopold worked with Philippe Auguste Jeanron on a translation of Vasari, and founded "La Société Libre de peinture et de sculpture". She bequeathed a group of four mythological pastels by Vigée (as well as paintings by Trinquesse and Marguerite Gérard) to the Dijon mBA in 1896.

Pierre DECOURCELLE (1856–1926), the son of the dramatist Adrien Decourcelle (a collector of faïence) and great nephew of the playwright Adolphe d'Ennery (who collected far eastern art), Decourcelle was also a man of letters and collector. He started his career as a journalist on Le Gaulois; his first play was L'As de Trèfle, while his greatest success was Les Deux Gosses, a melodrama concerning a stolen child. He later turned to the cinema. He built up a collection of French 18th century engravings from the age of 40 before switching to old master drawings and then paintings. A version of La Tour's abbé Pommery and a Pommery drawing by Cochin were acquired from a Mme Mauzin c.1902 in circumstances leading to a lawsuit for unpaid commission to an intermediary (v. Le Journal, 15.I.1905). He sold his old master collection in 1911; a collection which cost Fr400,000 sold for Fr1.5 million (Matilda Gay noted "the exorbitant prices fetched at this sensational sale - the high water-mark of frenzied snobbishness"). But he restarted collecting immediately, repurchasing some of his own collection at the sale and later. His widow, née Louise-Edmée About (-p.1950), inherited the collection; on 4.VI.1930 Georges Seligman was invited to 4 rue du Cirque, Paris to view the collection, which had just been seen by a succession of the leading dealers at hourly intervals; it included only two pastel préparations by La Tour, and it appears her price was not met. A number of drawings were sold in 2002.

Edgar DEGAS (1834–1917) inherited a number of pastels from his father, the banker Auguste de Gas (1807–1874). The group consisted of five pastels thought to be by La Tour, four of which seem to have been acquired by Auguste de Gas in an anonymous Paris sale, 20–21.V.1873, including versions of Marie-Josèphe and Mme de Pompadour, the inconnu now in the musée Jacquemart-André (of which Degas made a copy in oils which is now in Lausanne), and an unknown officier, then thought to be by La Tour, but in fact by Ducreux. All four, with a further La Tour magistrat, were lent to the Paris 1874a exhibition. Degas also owned a Rosalba autoritratto. A Perronneau oil portrait, Mme Miron, was also part of the collection; it appears in Degas's pastel portrait of his sister Thérèse of around 1869. Degas frequently visited Saint-Quentin. Shortly after the death of his father, the affairs of the family bank obliged Degas to seek to sell much of the collection, and some of the pastels were acquired by Hector Brame.

In a review of the Doucet sale for the Burlington, Dell expressed infatuation that a pastel by La Tour should fetch more than a canvas by Fragonard. He was expelled from France after the war, having criticised the French Government's peace negotiations in 1917. He later lived in New York. He lent several pastels to the Paris 1911 exhibition, which he organised with his associates Max Rothschild and R.-R. M. Sée (qq.v.). Peter DELMÉ (1710–1770), of Huguenot origins. He was the son of Sir Peter Delmé (–1728), a successful merchant who became Lord Mayor of London and a governor of the Bank of England. His son became an MP in 1741, and he was well known as a patron and connoisseur. Although his wealth earned him the nickname of Peter the Tsar, his prodigious spending led to financial difficulties and he shot himself at his London home, 15 Grosvenor Square. Delmé commissioned Arthur Pond to make numerous copies after Rosalba Carriera. The attribution of the pastels in the 1790 sale (presumably that of his son, Peter III, 1739–1780) should be treated with caution. Peter II's younger brother John (–1776) travelled to Italy with Robert Dingley, and joined the Society of Dilettanti in 1736.

Charles-Léon-Justin DÉMOGÉ (1864–1934), commandeur de la Légion d'honneur, one of the founders of the retailing empire, the "Nouvelles Galeries Réunies"; his widow, née Jeanne-Juliette Lucas (1873–1963), left a Russell pastel, Mrs Jeans, to the Louvre. Two more pastels by Russell, Mrs Raymond and Lady Georgiana Cavendish, as well as a Pillement landscape, appeared in an anonymous sale p.m., Paris, 14.III.1964, and a fourth emerged in 1984. Three of the Russells were acquired from Jacques Seligmann in 1919, having previously belonged to Charles Wertheimer and Léopold Hirsch.

Albert DEMONS (1842–1920), professeur, specialist in bone surgery. Legacy to the musée des Beaux-Arts, Bordeaux in 1927, with a further item in 1937 from Mme Demons.

Georges-Joseph DEMOTTE (1877–1923), Belgian antiques dealer and restorer. Based in Paris, rue de Berry c.1920, he had opened a business in New York by 1923. He was in competition with Duveen, and accusations of forgery of goods supplied by Demotte led to a defamation action that ended when Demotte was found dead near Versailles. His business passed to his son Lucien, who committed suicide in 1934. Demotte Inc. held exhibitions of Persian miniatures and mediaeval French sculpture and stained glass in New York between 1929 and 1934.

Pauline-Léontine-Elisabeth Mesnage, dite Mme DENAIN (1823–1892), de la Comédie-Française, mother of the wife of the composer Léo Delibes. As explained in a preface to her sale catalogue by Philippe Gille, Mme Denain acquired a large part of her collection from Henri Didier, including many important eighteenth century French portraits (Boucher, Nattier etc.).

Aignan-Thomas DESFRICHES (1715–1800), draughtsman, patron and collector from Orléans. Dutch paintings figured strongly in his collection, but the pastels seem mainly to have been Perronneau's portraits of members of his family. Perronneau 2017, p. 181 contains extracts from his inventories concerning these. In an inventory of 3.IX.1760, Perronneau's painting of the artists Gillequin (a present from the artist) was valued at 30 livres, while the pastel of Desfriches's nephew Robbé de Beauveset was estimated at 72 livres, the same value as given to a Chardin still-life, Faisan et gibecière (now in Berlin). His daughter Perpétue-Félicité (1745–1834) married Jean Cadet de Limay; at her p.m. sale (Paris, Bonnefons, Paillet, 6–7.v.1834), two Perronneau pastels (Robbé de Beauveset and L'Aurore) were bought by Alphonse Gatineau (q.v.).

DESMAREST, Desmarests, Desmaretz etc.: several members of this family of engravers, experts and collector/dealers may be referred to in the late-18th century sale records, which include pastels by Boucher and Carriera. The premises of "Desmarest, graveur depuis 1761" are still preserved in the Palais-Royal. A large collection of drawings and prints were in the 1778 sale; possibly the same vendor as the dealer in the 1797 sale of "J. Desmarests, cessation de commerce". "J. Desmarest, peintre, négociant" was a commissaire priseur at the hôtel de Bullion, rue J. J. Rousseau in 1789 until 1794, when he moved to maison Charost, rue Montmartre, and as later at rue du Bouloi, c.1800; evidently he was the "citoyen Demarest, marchand de tableau, rue du Bouloy, no. 46" who advertised to collect pictures to be sold for the benefit of a painter whose premises had been burnt (Le Citoyen français, 27.II.1803). According to the Nouvelles politiques, nationales et étrangères, "M. Desmarests, graveur, & membre de l'institut" died in Paris, 7.IV.1806 (perhaps in error for Nicolas Desmarests, 1725–1815). The S. Desmaretz who engraved a Sainte Geneviève after Rosalba may well be Sébastien-Charles-François-Xavier Desmarests (1771–), but he is too young to be the dealer. Dupuy-Vachey 2017 suggests that he was probably the history painter Jean-Baptiste-Frédéric Desmarais (1756–1813), but it is difficult to see how the chronology fits. He is not to be confused with the pastel inventor Dumarets (q.v.).

His albums of architectural drawings are in a number of public collections, including Berlin and St Petersburg. The Bibliothèque nationale de France received 1328 drawings and engravings as a donation in 1890, and later purchased another 3500 sheets. Three pastels were acquired at the 1896 sale by the musée Carnavalet. His grandson Philippe d'Estailleur-Chanteraine (1894–1965) had a pastel said to be by Perronneau of the naturalist Daubenton.

over by Shell. They were also supporters of the arts. Émile's daughter, Marie-Henriette, Mme Henri Goldet, inherited the La Tour pastel which was given to Versailles, while a younger daughter, Fernande, and her husband Edward Esmond owned La Tour's Mme Le Comte.

An earlier sale, "par suite du départ de M. M, officier supérieur", is presumably his too; the two "La Tour" pendants were included, as were pastels by Boucher and Prud'hon.

Antoine-Joseph DEZALLIER D'ARGENVILLE (1680–1765), secrétaire du roi, celebrated naturalist, connoisseur and collector. His influential Abrégé de la vie des plus fameux peintres appeared in four volumes, 1745–52; its technical analysis, particularly of drawings, drew on his own extensive collection. A second edition, 1761–62, included a life of Rosalba based on information supplied, for example, by Jean-François Séguier 1752. Dezallier's own letters to Séguier include important information on the cost of pastels (v. Treatises), as well as implying his own use of the medium. His collection was dispersed in two sales (1766 and 1779, following his widow's death). His son Antoine-Nicolas (1723–1796), also a magistrate, was the author of the Voyage pittoresque de Paris (1749) and des environs de Paris (1755), of several gardening treatises, and of an extension of his father's work, the Vies des fameux architectes et sculpteurs... (1787). Nicolas's sister married Jacques-Claude de Bèze de Lys (q.v.).

Henri-Paul-Marie DIDIER (1823–1868), député for Ariège. According to one source, "Il s'est un peu occupé d'art, un peu de littérature, beaucoup de lui-même et fort peu de politique." He owed his position to his brother Edouard, préfet de l'Ariège, and the influence of docteur Véron (q.v.) whose collection he bought and resold a few months later at auction under Véron's name (17–18.III.1858). Didier died in a lunatic asylum shortly after delivering his only speech to the Assemblée nationale in 16 years.

François DIDOT (1689–1757) established the printing business in Paris which was continued by an extended dynasty. The celebrated type founder was Firmin Didot (1764–1836). (He may have been the Didot whose sale took place in 1825.) His son, Ambroise-Firmin Didot, later known as Ambroise Firmin-Didot (1790–1876), diplomat and traveller, took over the business in 1827. He was interested in classical literature, typography, paper making and engraving, and his reference books on the Drevets and Les Graveurs de portraits en France, 1875–77 are of great use. He presumably assembled the collection of 18 pastels and drawings by Wallerant Vaillant which were lent to the Paris 1888 exhibition by his son Alfred Firmin-Didot (1828–1913), also a printer. The group was then broken up, but five pastels them presumably passed to his son Maurice Firmin-Didot (1859–1925); in 1927 they were with Maurice's two daughters, the comtesse Jean de Montbron, née Germaine Firmin-Didot (1891–1968), of La Jarne, Charente-Maritime, and Mme Jacques Cochin, née Marthe Firmin-Didot (1889–1973). Didot: Paris, Henry Lacoste, 6–9.IV.1825:

He travelled in Italy in 1733–34, and wrote to Rosalba Carriera on 18.VI.1735 to acknowledge safe receipt of his own portrait and to commission a version of a pastel he had seen at Consul Smith's. He also owned a version of Felicità Sartori, engraved by Houston, which may have been the second pastel the artist told the English merchant Peter Philip Jamineau would shortly be sent to Dingley.

The address confirms that he was the painter listed in the Almanach général des marchands in 1772, and had a magasin de tableaux in that street in 1776 (Almanach historique). The négociant de tableaux et curiosités collaborated with Remy on providing expertises for estate inventories. Several law cases suggest that Donjeux was dishonest in his dealings. He died in Paris, 59 rue de Cléry 23.II.1792, aged 64, leaving as heir (to annuities of 1660 livres on principal amount of 33200 inter alia) his son, Nicolas-Antoine-Vincent Dehaye, dit Donjeux (Paris 17.XI.1762 – p.1801), of Grand-Gentilly, who, on 5.IX.1795 in Paris, married Marie-Jeanne Fanaut in Paris.

Georges DORMEUIL (1856–1939), Paris, head of the textile firm founded by Jules Dormeuil in 1842. He created an important collection of mediaeval works (his first piece was bought at the age of 16), many acquired with advice from Marius Paulme, who prepared an illustrated manuscript catalogue of the whole collection. In addition to a donation to the Louvre, Dormeuil gave an important series of Saint-Aubin drawings to the musée Carnavalet. He lent pastels by La Tour and Perronneau to both the Cent pastels (Paris 1908a) and Paris 1927a exhibitions. His collection was preserved and continued by his family, notably his son Pierre Dormeuil (1887–1976) and grandson, Xavier Dormeuil (1922–2012), following whose death a number of pastels were sold.

Jacques DOUCET (1853–1929) made his fortune as owner of one of the leading houses of haute-couture in Paris from 1895. He also assembled one of the most important collections of XVIII^e drawings, pictures and objets d'art in his hôtel on the rue Spontini. His interest was sparked by seeing two La Tour pastels at the home of Degas, which gave him "le virus du XVIII^e siècle". A watercolour by Adrien Karbowsky shows the main drawing room around 1905 with a wall on which four La Tour pastels are hung among Chardin, Ducreux, Lawrence and Reynolds canvases. A valuation of the collection was taken c.1910 (INHA archives). Doucet's decision to sell the hôtel in the rue Spontini and his XVIII^e collections followed the sudden death of his mistress Mme Raimon, née Jeanne Rauid (Delatour 2019). The sale of this collection by Lair-Dubreuil in 1912 achieved an astonishing 15,272,796 francs - not to universal approval: "Les prix atteints par les bibelots de la vente Doucet révoltent les braves gens. Acheter 600 000 francs une tête de Latour, l'accrocher à son mur, immobiliser de tels capitaux est une manière de rendre les infortunés criminels", wrote Mme de Saint-Marceau in her Journal. After the sale, Doucet moved to Neuilly, where he started a new collection, of the avant garde of his day. To both of these he brought his legendary perfectionism. He supported a number of writers (Suarès, Max Jacob, Reverdy, Breton, Aragon) and left to the université de Paris two libraries, the Bibliothèque d'art et d'archéologie and the Bibliothèque littéraire. Part of his collections descended in the family to his great-nephew Jean Angladon-Dubrujeaud and are now part of the Fondation Angladon in Avignon.

Roger DRAGON DE GOMIECOURT (1860–1931), editor of L'Impartial, bibliophile and collector of pastels and drawings.

Lit.: Renart 1908, no. 7661

Dr Anton C. R. DREESMANN (1923–2000) was the third in a line of collectors that stretches back over a century. His grandfather Anton Dreesmann (1854–1934), co-founder of the Vroom & Dreesmann department stores (the largest department store chain in The Netherlands until its bankruptcy in 2015), was a distinguished collector, while the Rijksmuseum acquired some pieces at the sale of his son Willem's collection in 1960. Although Anton was particularly interested in Dutch art, his collection was much broader, and was noted for its eclectic character. Among a significant holding of French drawings are several sheets by Lemoine and a pastel by La Tour. In addition to the sale of old master pictures and drawings; portrait miniatures, gold boxes and objects of vertu on 11.IV.2002, sales of impressionist and modern art and of European furniture, works of art and Chinese export porcelain took place on the preceding two days. London, Christie's, 11.IV.2002: Lot 634: La Tour, ?Fel

Hippolyte DREUX (1800–1884), Paris collector with many interests. At the Lemoine sale in 1828 he bought a Vivien pastel which reappeared in two of his sales, Paris, Ridet, 7–8.II.1851, Lot 73; vente p.m., Paris, Delestre, 27.V.1902, Lot 56. Lit.: Lugt 694–95; 1302-03

Carle DREYFUS (1875–1952), of 101 boulevard Maiesherbes, Paris 8e, in 1922, youngest child of Gustave Dreyfus (1837–1914), the collector of Italian renaissance objects (his collection was bought by Joseph Duveen). He joined the Louvre in 1901 and rose to become conservateur en chef. He made extensive donations to various museums. A Louis Dreyfus donated a pastel by Perronneau (Mme Miron) to a charity auction in 15.VI.1917, and owned Perronneau's Mme Dutilleul; he may have been Louis Louis-Dreyfus (1867–1940), grandson of the founder of the banking branch of the family, or his brother, Charles-Louis Dreyfus (1870–1929), who owned a La Tour pastel (Silvestre). Le vicomte Jean-Baptiste-Adolphe DU BARRY (1749–1778), officier aux Gardes du roi. Comte Jean du Barry was protector of the young Jeanne Bécu, who married his brother, comte Guillaume du Barry, while she was Louis XV's mistress. Jean's son Adolphe was the vendor in the 1774 sale. Mme du Barry's own collections were dispersed in a number of sales, notably by Paillet, 17.II.1777 & seq. Paris, Remy, Le Brun, 21.XI.1774 & seq.: Lot 134: [Anon.]: Deux petits tableaux, l'un peint à l'huile, l'autre au pastel, de forme ovale, ils représentent des fleurs dans des vases [21 livres]

Jean DUBOIS (fl. 1901–27), collector of dessins et objets de curiosité du XVIII^e siècle. His 1901 sale included one pastel. A later sale took place at Drouot on 21–22.III.1927. Paris, Drouot, Chevallier, Paulme, 7.III.1901: Lot 20: La Tour, attr., femme

Jean DUBOIS (fl. Paris 1763–89), marchand orfèvre-joaillier (initially a lapidaire), rue des Poulies, marchand de tableaux. He acted on behalf of the duc de Choiseul in sales in the 1760s (the date however uncertain). His collections were dispersed in sales in Paris, 12.II.1782, 31.III.1784, 20.XII.1785 (Le Brun) and 18.XII.1788 (Paillet). In .IV.1789 he was bankrupt and fled to the Austrian Netherlands (he had earlier travelled to holland to acquire pictures). William DUBOSC (–1704). An advertisement appeared in the Post man for 25.XI.1704 advertising “Several Pictures in miniature, being History, Fruits, Flowers, Landships, &c. Some others in Pastelle. Several Prints in Frames and without Frames, with Designs, Figures, Copper-plates, Books, &c. belonging to Mr Wm Dubosc decess'd. Are to be sold at reasonable rates at Mr Peter Lecompte's, Linnen-Draper, in Panton-street, near Leicester Fields”. (source: artworld.york.ac.uk/Friedman.jsp).

Louis-Alexandre DUCASTEL (1793–1872), notaire, bienfaiteur de Saint-Germain-en-Laye. The musée Ducastel-Vera there holds some of his pastels.

Philippe-Étienne Duclerc ou DUCLER (Paris 1778 – Dunkerque 23.VII.1840), chev. LH, ancien gouverneur de l'Inde, commissaire général de la Marine, Dunkerque 1835. He was the son of Jean-Étienne Duclerc, marchand, and Louise-Denise-Angélique Plailly, and in 1819 he married Marie-Jeanne-Agathe Rabbe. Vente p.m., Paris, Hôtel des commissaires-priseurs, place de la Bourse, Jacquin, Durand, 22–23.II.1847: Lot 52: La Tour, inconnue

Alexandre DUMAS (1824–1895), fils, de l'Académie française 1874; dramatis, author of La Dame aux camélias 1848, illegitimate son of the novelist of Alexandre Davy de la Pailleterie, dit Alexandre Dumas (1802–1870), in whose memoirs is the story of a pastel by La Tour belonging to M. Villenave (q.v.). Dumas fils owned pastels by Fragonard, La Tour (Silvestre) and Perronneau (Le Normant). A sale took place in Paris, Oudart, Barre, 28.III.1865, and included a pastel of Mme de Polignac, by Vigée [Le Brun], Fr101. A further sale took place in Paris, Drouot, Léon Tual, Chevallier, 12–13.V.1892, with a preface by Charles Yriarte which mentions Dumas père (but without identifying any pastels in his collection). It included the Perronneau (Lot 186, FFr5600); a pastel said to be by Rosalba (lot 187, Mlle Aissé); and a pastel by Fragonard, bought in and resold at his vente p.m., 2–3.III.1896, Lot 93.

Jean-Louis DUPAIN-TRIEL (1722–1805), ingénieur géographe du roi et de Monsieur, author of Invitations familières faites aux élèves de ce temps dans les beaux-arts ... par un ancien amateur, Paris, n.d. [c.1800]. With Lalande (with whom he had collaborated on a plan of Toulouse published 1772), he lent “Deux portraits au Pastel d'après Bachelier, par Mlle Delrieu Elève de M. Bastide” to the Salon de Toulouse 1772. In 1745 he married Catherine Sellier. His elder brother was Louis-Charles Dupain de Montesson, ingénieur des camps, tutor to the future Louis XVI, and author of L'Art de lever les plans.

La marquise DU PLESSIS-BELLIÈRE, née Marie de Pastoret (1817–1897), of the hôtel de Pastoret, 6 place de la Concorde, Paris and the château de Moreuil, Somme, daughter of Amédée-David, marquis de Pastoret (1791–1857), sénateur, a descendant of Rouillé de l'Étang. After the death of her husband, Hervé-Alexandre-Victorien de Rougé, marquis du Plessis-Bellièvre in 1888, she retired to Moreuil where Eugène Féral conducted an estimation c.1890; the three La Tour pastels were dismissed as “genre de La Tour”, Mme Rouillé valued at just 300 francs. Her will (leaving her estate to the pope) was contested by relatives and the ventes après décès only took place seven years after her death.

DURAND-RUEL & Cie (fl. Paris 1833–1974), established c.1833 in Paris by Jean-Marie-Fortuné Durand (1800–1865). Initially a stationery shop, the firm developed into art dealing from its practice of exchanging artists' materials for pictures. Paul Durand-Ruel (1831–1922), the founder's son, was responsible for the firm's association with Impressionism.

Sir Edwin DURNING-LAWRENCE, Bt, né Lawrence (1837–1914), MP, barrister and writer, with a particular interest in the proposition that Bacon was Shakespeare. His library of some 5700 items (including the first four Shakespeare folios) was donated to University College, London; he was also a donor to the British Museum. He formed a large collection of pastel sketches by Russell (many of which he had restored); several were donated to the NPG, London, and some to the V&A. One was inherited from his brother, Sir James Clarke Lawrence (1821–1897), Lord Mayor of London in 1868–69. The latter's daughter Theodora Agnes (1889–1971) sold two Russell pastels to the Royal Cornwall Museum in 1948; they appear to have belonged, along with a third Russell, to another uncle, a third brother, Sir William Lawrence (1818–1897), of 75 Lancaster Gate, London, an MP, alderman and builder. Probate records suggest Sir William's assets passed to Sir Edwin, to the latter's widow Edith Jane, née Durning-Smith and on her death in 1929 to Theodora.

DUVEEN Brothers, Inc. (fl. 1868–1964), established in 1868 by Joel Duveen (1843–1908), and later run by his son, Joseph, Lord Duveen of Milbank (1869–1939). He presented a “Perronneau” girl with a cat to the National Gallery in 1921. Lady Duveen had a pastel jeune femme attributed to Vigée Le Brun, and seven pastels by John Russell were included in her estate sale at Christie's, 20.III.1984 (lots 63–69). Much earlier (c.1911), the firm had organised an exhibition of ten pastels by Russell: they included a surprising number of works apparently matching pastels Russell had exhibited in the RA but which Williamson had catalogued as lost. Duveen's sister Florence (1886–1978) married René Gimpel (q.v.). Among the pastels supplied by the firm were a “pair of old French pastels by Perronneau”, acquired from Lady Dorothy Nevill in 1902 and sent on approval to the Stotesburys in 1922, still unpaid in 1930. A good set of Rosalba's Four Seasons, purchased in 1901 for about £1400, were broken up: two were sold to the Duke of Marlborough for £4750 but returned a year later; two went to George Jay Gould, and were returned after his death, the frames damaged; one of those, still in the same frame, is in the Huntington. The firm's records are at the Getty Research Institute.

Nelson EDDY (1901–1967), singer, actor and amateur painter and sculptor. He initially collected pewter but later turned to English 17th century and modern French painting. A pastel by Roslin, M. de Fries, was among the pictures sold by his descendants in 2009.

Dorothy Braude EDINBURG (1920–2014), collector of prints, drawings and ceramics. She was the daughter of Harry B. & Bessie K. Braude and wife of Joseph Edinburg, an executive at the hardware firm in Boston of which her father had been president. From 1991 on she donated more than 1500 works to The Art Institute of Chicago, and a bequest of more than $35 million at her death. She owned a version of La Tour's abbé Deschamps.

Mrs Thomas Stearns ELIOT, née Valerie Fletcher (1926–2012), widow of the poet, assembled a fine collection of drawings and miniatures sold in London, Christie's, 20.XI.2013, including a Gainsborough pastel, Duchess of Buccleuch.

Mrs Augustus Van Horne ELLIS, née Anne Middleton (1859–1949): her donation to the New York Historical Society in 1940 included a pastel by Cotes (Rivington), while Dunlap's pastel of Washington, which had passed down in the Van Horne family, was given to the US Senate.

Theodore Thaddeus ELLIS (1867–1934) and his 2nd wife, née Mary Griffin Sullivan (–1943) of Knollwood, Worcester, Massachusetts: bequest to Worcester Art Museum, 1940. Ellis made his money in blanket manufacture, newspapers and printing; he was publisher of the Worcester Telegram and became co-owner of the Chicago Daily News in 1931. His estate was valued at more than $2m. His art collection ranged from Winslow Homer to a painting once thought to be by Leonardo.

Pastels: Coypel, marquise de Lamure.

The EPHRUSSI family of Greek financiers from Odessa made their fortune in grain in the first half of the 19th century. Ignaz von Ephrussi (1829–1899), founder of the Banque Ephrussi in Vienna, married Emilie Porgès (1836–1900, q.v.). His half-brother Maurice Ephrussi (1849–1916) ran the Paris branch of the bank, together with Théophile Porgès. Ignaz's nephew Charles Ephrussi (1849–1905), amateur art historian and collector, came to Paris c.1871 and lived at 11 avenue d'Iéna. He founded the Gazette des beaux-arts. His main interests were in Japanese prints and in contemporary French painting, but an essay on Dürer's drawings was also well received. Moving in the circles of Mme Émile Straus, Madeleine Lemaire and princesse Mathilde, he was considered to be a model for Proust's Swann. He never married, but had a liaison with Mme Cahen d'Anvers, née Louise de Morpurgo (1845–1926). His sister Betty married Maximilien Kann (1842–1901), and their daughter Fanny (1870–1917) married Théodore Reinach (1860–1928); she inherited a Van Loo pastel from Charles's brother, Jules Ephrussi (1846–1915). Charles's uncles Michel (1845–1914) and Maurice (1849–1916) also lived in Paris. Mme Michel Ephrussi, who lived at 48, rue La Pérouse, Paris 8e, in 1922, owned two pastels by Mme Gault in 1920. Maurice married Béatrice de Rothschild (1864–1934); she built the Villa Ephrussi de Rothschild at Saint-Jean-Cap-Ferrat (v. Collections), which she bequeathed to the Institut de France.

Émile, baron d'ERLANGER (1832–1911), a banker from Frankfurt, settled in Paris in 1858. He donated the Goya murals from la Quinta del Sordo to the Prado in 1881, and financed the first performance of Tannhäuser at the Paris Opéra. His four sons and their descendants included bankers, collectors, composers and painters. Emile Beaumont (1866–1939), banker and patron of the arts, adopted British nationality; he lived at 139 Piccadilly, Lord Byron's house, and Falconwood. Rodolphe (1872–1932), painter and composer, built a palace in Sidi Bou Said, Tunisia, now a museum for Arab musical instruments, inherited by his son Leo (1898–1978) and his wife Edwina Prue (1907–1994). Frédéric d'Erlanger joined his brothers Emile Beaumont and Rodolphe in presenting the Drouais portrait of the comte de Vaudreuil to the National Gallery in 1927; the sitter had owned the Vigée Le Brun pastel which belonged to Baron Leo, in 1909; it passed to his sons, Leo and Gerald before its sale in 1946.

"Daisy", Mrs Reginald FELLOWES, née Marguerite-Séverine-Philippine Decazes (1890–1962), daughter of the duc Decazes (q.v.). After the suicide of her mother, Isabelle-Blanche Singer, she was brought up by her aunt, Winnaretta Singer, princesse Edmond de Polignac (q.v.). In 1910 she married prince Jean de Broglie (q.v.); there were three daughters (the comtesse de Castéja, the marquise de La Moussaye and Mrs Alfred Kraus). Soon after his death, she married (1919) the Hon. Reginald Ailwyn Fellowes (1884–1953), younger son of the 2nd Baron de Ramsay, a banker. Daisy Fellowes wrote several novels, of which Les Dimanches de la comtesse de Narbonne is best known. She became celebrated as a fashion icon (for designers such as Chanel and Schiaparelli; Cecil Beaton photographed her, while Lee Creelman Erickson drew her with the comtesse Crisenoy de Lyonnie, q.v., in Louiseboulanger & Doeuillet: Vogue, 1.VIII.1927) and as wealthy hostess in her palace Les Zoraïdes in Cap Martin in the South of France. Among her celebrated purchases was the Tête de Bélier pink diamond from Cartier, originally a gift from Catherine the Great to Prince Potemkin, which she had reset. Her name was linked with the Prince of Wales before that of Mrs Simpson. Three Perronneau pastels were included in the 1937 sale; a fourth was in Féral's inventory of the collection of prince Jean de Broglie.

FRIEDRICH der Große (1712–1786), king, collector and amateur pastellist. Dictionary, artists

FRIEDRICH AUGUST I. (II.) Kurfürst von Sachsen, König August II. von Polen 1697–1704, 1709–, "August der Starke" (1670–1733), and his son Friedrich August II. (III.) Kurfürst von Sachsen, König August III. von Polen 1733 (1696–1763). While August the Strong started the collection of Rosalba Carriera, it was his successor who displayed an unlimited appetite for her pastels; the gallery in Dresden in which some 157 of her pastels were at one stage hung (n. 1887 catalogue) is justly celebrated. He is thought to have visited her studio while on the grand tour in 1713. Such was August's enthusiasm that he persuaded Mengs to work in pastel to produce an important series of portraits. The collection also has examples by La Tour and Liotard. Following the abdication of the last king of Saxony after the First World War, the Wettin family assets were dispersed; arrangements were concluded by 7.VII.1924 (published in the Sächsisches Gesetzblatt, 9.VIII.1924, p. 481) to return pictures to their original owners. Some of the Rosalba pastels had already been sent to Graf Pálffy (sale, Bad Pistyan, Czechoslovakia, 10.VI.–1.VII.1924); others appeared in sales organised by the dealer Rausch in Dresden and Berlin. By 1929 the number of Rosalbas had dropped to 102, while a further 27 were lost (presumably destroyed) by 1945.

Il cavaliere Francesco Maria Niccolò GABBURRI (1676–1742), Florentine diplomat, connoisseur, amateur artist, art historian and collector. His Vite di pittori, c.1730–42, a manuscript in the Palatine library compiled during the last twelve years of his life, is an invaluable source of information about artists in Florence as well as foreign connoisseurs. It has been made available online by the Fondazione Memofonte. Gabburri lent 205 drawings to the Florence exhibition of 1737, including some twenty pastel self-portraits mainly by contemporary Italian artists. Caution is required: some of these artists seem to have worked in gouache rather than pastel, and the descriptions may be unreliable.

David GARRICK (1717–1779), celebrated actor, and his wife, née Eva Maria Veigel (1724–1822), dancer, were the subjects of pastels by Liotard now at Chatsworth. Garrick was a wealthy man, and his estate inventory (conducted to an unusual level of detail) reveals a considerable number of pictures at both his homes, in Hampton and at the Adelphi in London. A sale took place after his widow's death, on the premises at Hampton. Garrick owned a great number of pictures by Pillement (at least 26 landscapes and five drawings, although none was described as in pastel); a letter from the artist in 1772 accompanied four of these "bagatelles" sent to the actor and his wife as a present. A set of 9 small drawings, portraits of "females, natives of the Greek Islands", might conceivably be from Liotard. The pastel of La Clairon is likely to be French.

GOLDSCHMIDT. There were a number of collectors or dealers of this name. The Galerie Goldschmidt-Wallerstein in Berlin specialised in modern art c.1900; they held an exhibition on Pesne in 1926, and the New York gallery (730 Fifth Ave) owned a Liotard homme in 1934. Edmond Goldschmidt owned a version of La Tour's Perrinet de Jars before 1901. Paul Goldschmidt had a Carriera (contessa Miani) after 1908. Leopold Benedict Hayum Goldschmidt (1830–1904), brother of the philanthropist Salomon H. Goldschmidt (1814–1898), sold a version of Perronneau's Van Robais to Camille Groult.

Jules (1830–1870) and Edmond (1822–1896) Huot de GONCOURT: authors, amateur artists, collectors and art critics. Their writings (notably L'Art du XVIII^e siècle, 1859–75) made a major contribution to restoring the reputation of the French eighteenth-century painters and draughtsmen. Their extensive collections were dispersed in several sessions in 1897, including old (26–28.IV.1897) and modern (30.IV.–1.V.1897) prints, as well as their drawings collection (15–17.II.1897), carefully reconstructed in Launay 1991. It is perhaps surprising that, apart from a handful of drawings with pastel and some La Tour préparations, this contained only two pastel portraits, the La Tour maréchal de Belle-Isle and a Vigée Le Brun (Beaujon) which the Goncourts attributed to Perronneau.

Gonzaga, v. Valenti

Charles GORDON: An auction of the property of Charles Gordon, quitting the kingdom, at Mr Edwards, Cornhill, 8.XI.1797 (not in Lugt); according to the advertisement in the Times (18.X.1797), it included a “brilliant assemblage of fine drawings, in crayons” etc. Subsequent advertisements for what seems to have been the same sale identified the vendor only as a gentleman and artist.

Julia Emily GORDON (1810–1896), painter, daughter of General Sir James Willoughby Gordon; in addition to numerous works by Wilkie and others, she bequeathed a Lawrence pastel of Mrs Siddons to the National Gallery; it is now in the Tate.

Jacques GOUDSTIKKER (1897–1940), one of the most important dealers in Dutch old master paintings before World War II. His collection of more than 1000 pictures was seized by the Germans. Some 200 were finally returned to the family in 2006; many of these were sold in New York, Christie's, 19.IV.2007. The firm had also handled pastels by Drouais, Carriera and Troost.

George Jay GOULD I (1864–1923), son of Jay Gould, financier and railroad executive, of Lakewood, New Jersey. His posthumous inventory carried out by Duveen (Getty Research Institute) catalogued his vast collections, including a number of pictures that went back to Duveen. He owned two pastel Seasons by Carriera, a John Russell (George Monro Russell), the frames damaged, as well as a pastel copy after an oil by Nattier.

François-Louis GOUNOD (1758–1823), artist and collector, father of the composer, pupil of Lépicié. Two of the Chardin pastels he owned came from the Sylvestre collection. The status of the 59 La Tour sheets in the sale cannot be determined.

Adolphe GOUPIL (1806–1893) owned one of the most prestigious Paris galleries in the third quarter of the 19th century, based at 2 Place de l'Opéra. In 1878 it was taken over by Léon Boussod (q.v.) and René Valadon. The firm's archives are available at the Getty Provenance Index, and reveal that they handled very few pastels (a couple of Rosalbas, one "retouched" by Constant Joseph Brochart; one by Perronneau is in fact an oil).

Charles-Frédéric de La Tour du Pin de Bourlon, marquis de GOVERNET (1694–1775), collector. His posthumous sale, Paris, 6–10.XI.1775, contained no pastel, but he appears as purchaser of sheets by Coypel and Le Brun from 1741.

Lord Ronald Charles Leveson-GOWER (1845–1916), youngest son of the 2nd Duke of Sutherland, aesthete, politician, sculptor and writer. In addition to his role in the collection of drawings sold to the duc d'Aumale (n. Lenoir), Lord Ronald Gower owned several pastels that were sold at Christie's, 28.I.1911, when he left Hammerfield, Penshurst, including items described as Rosalba's self-portrait, Read's Duchess of Argyll, Hamilton, Capt. Harvey, Russell, Bessborough, Nanteuil [éc. fr.], Mme de Sévigné etc.

Thomas Robinson, 1st Baron GRANTHAM 1761 (1695–1770), KB 1742, diplomat, in Vienna 1730–48. He was portrayed by artists from Mengs to Ramsay, and his collection also included pastels of the imperial couple. Later generations of his family owned portraits by Gardner. In his correspondence with his brother "Fritz", preserved in the Bedfordshire and Luton archives, there are numerous references to crayon paintings by artists from Gardner to Pillement, not all of which can be fully understood today: e.g. the "two bad crayon portraits" which Fritz and Tom are almost ashamed to send (12.VI.1778).

Friedrich Melchior Baron von GRIMM (1723–1807), diplomat, writer, art critic and agent. He was in Paris from 1749 to around 1768, travelling widely thereafter before settling in Gotha in 1775. He was closely connected with the Encyclopédistes, and his Correspondance littéraire, philosophique et critique, a bi-monthly bulletin which included his (and Diderot's) views on contemporary art, was circulated among a number of courts in Germany, Poland and Sweden. His trip to Russia in 1773 was similarly influential in spreading French artistic ideas.

Émile GROSJEAN-MAUPIN (1863–1933), author of an Esperanto dictionary. He owned pastels by Nanteuil (Gallais) and Pillement (deux paysages) in 1927.

Joseph-Émile GROSS (1878–1914), who died in action at Paissy (Marne) as a lieutenant, 4^e régiment de Zouaves. Under the guidance (it is said) of Sir Charles Robinson, Charles Fairfax Murray and Martin H. Colnaghi, he formed a collection of English pastels and drawings together with his brother-in-law Xavier Haas (q.v.). It is unclear which works were added by Haas to those sold in 1927.

Camille GROULT (1832–1908), heir to a flour-milling family from Vitry-sur-Seine, was renowned as the great amateur of the 19th century; a friend of Edmond de Goncourt, with whom “nous cautions art, et cette causerie lui apporte une griserie, vraiment une sorte de pochardise [...]” (Journal, 8.I.1890). Showing friends a picture for which he had paid the high price for which he had a reputation, he remarked “Je donnerais cinquante mille francs de plus pour l'avoir découvert pour cent francs.” His initial focus on XVIII^e pastels and drawings was later broadened to the early nineteenth century, and spread to English art. Groult's collection was inventoried after his death, Me Breuillard, 24.I.1908. It passed to his widow, Alice-Émilie Thomas Tassin de Moncourt (1837–1918), of Olivet, Loiret, who was related to a number of Perronneau's subjects. Their son Jean Groult (1868–1951) inherited the collection (another inventory was made in 1952), which then passed to their grandson Pierre Bordeaux-Groult (1916–2007).

Calouste Sarkis GULBENKIAN (1869–1955): born in Turkey to an Armenian family of carpet traders, Gulbenkian used his father's oil interests in Baku to become an immensely wealthy financier and oil tycoon. From 1916 he negotiated a number of spectacular deals involving international shareholdings in Royal Dutch/Shell and Turkish and Iraq petroleum companies; one of these affiliations resulted in Gulbenkian losing his British citizenship in 1940. He assembled a collection of antique, oriental and Western art of the highest quality in his house on the Avenue d'Iéna in Paris. After his death the collection was moved to a specially built museum in Portugal, financed with the $70 million fortune he left. In keeping with his motto "only the best is good enough for me", the only pastels he seems to have owned were La Tour's spectacular Duval de l'Épinoy and the beautiful but restrained portrait of the dancer Marie Sallé.

Eugène-Xavier HAAS (1876–1936), from Avolsheim, settled in Paris from 1891, of 14, rue Cassini, Paris, inherited the collection of English pastels and drawings formed by his brother-in-law Émile Gross (q.v.): Haas had married Gross's younger sister Isabelle in 1906, when he was described as a banker; but together with Gross he was a collector-dealer. In 1913 they organised an exhibition of Romney drawings at their gallery, 4 rue Édouard VII. Haas's son, Xavier-Victor (1907–1950), was a painter. A number of Haas's English pastels and drawings (most from Gross) were sold in 1927; the catalogues were edited by R. R. M. Sée, and some of the attributions should be treated with caution.

François-Michel HARENC DE PRESLE (1710–1802), banker and collector. “Some fine pictures, vases, statues, china and great quantities of Boule’s works” according to Walpole who visited 1.IX.1775. Costa de Beauregard, on his visit 22.II.1767, noted “Dans la chambre où il se tient, sont plusieurs portraits au pastel peints par Boucher, d’après La Rosalba.” These may not be those that appeared in his 1792 sale as autograph, one of which was said to come from the 1777 Randon de Boisset sale. Thiéry (1787) describes, in a chambre à coucher, in addition to paintings by Murillo, Reynolds and Rubens, “un beau pastel, par M. de la Tour” and “une tête de Rosalba”, the former suggesting that not all the collections were included in the 1792 and 1795 sales.

Samuel HAYES (1665–1759), English collector and notorious libertine, enriched by the Mississippi bubble, settled in Paris, rue Taranne, where he formed a collection of more than 81 oil paintings listed in his posthumous inventory (AN MC/CVIII/534, 14.XII.1759), most of which appeared in his widow’s sale (Paris, Remy, 18.XII.1766 & seq.). Among these was a “Venus et Adonis original de Mr Le Moyne . . . peint sur toile” listed in 1759 (item 39, 250 livres), but not in 1766 (this cannot be Tessin’s version). Although no pastel is listed, he had consigned a pastel tête d’une femme for François Lemoyne to copy, and sought to reclaim it on the latter’s death, as its retention prevented its sale. This suggests that Hayes was also a dealer. Hayes may have known Lemoyne through his fellow Mississipien, François Berger. Sir George Lindsay HOLFORD (1860–1926) inherited the art and arboreal collections of his father Robert Stayner Holford (1808–1892), reputedly the richest commoner in England. He was also the nephew of Sir Coutts Lindsay, Bt, owner of the Grosvenor Gallery. Holford's posthumous sale in 1928, with a number of paintings by Rembrandt, raised more than £400,000. Dorchester House, site of the present hotel, was demolished. His widow, née Susannah Wilson (1864–1943; her first husband was Jack Menzies), retained a number of the pastels, and some were inherited by her daughter-in-law, Mrs Ian Graham Menzies, née Alice Stöttinger (1912–) before the 1977 sale.

Jasper JOLY (1812–1892), LL.D., vicar of Tuam, bibliophile, who donated some 15,000 volumes, manuscripts and prints to the Royal Dublin Society in 1863. Two years later he presented four small Hamilton pastels to the Duke of Leinster; they represented members of the FitzGerald family.

Pierre-Louis-Samuel JOLY DE BAMMEVILLE (1759–1811), négociant et maire de Saint-Quentin 1810. When two of the La Tour pastels (Rousseau and Lemoyne) failed to sell in the Paillet auction in Paris, .v.1810, the maire bought them for Fr151.50. This appears to be the sum of the Fr150 presale estimate for Rousseau and a token sum for the Lemoyne which had been consigned as by La Tour, but returned as "par un peintre inconnu".

Claude-Prosper JOLYOT DE CRÉBILLON (1707–1777), the licentious author, was the son of Prosper Jolyot de Crébillon (1674–1762), the tragedian, the subject of a pastel by La Tour, while Crébillon le fils was portrayed by Gautier-Dagoty in pastel and by Liotard in miniature. Four pastels by Boucher and a pair by M. Griet [Grillet] were in the son's posthumous sale, Paris, 3.VI.1777.

Édouard JONAS (1883–1961), antiquaire, place Vendôme; Ernest Cognacq was a frequent client, and Jonas catalogued his bequest to the city of Paris before becoming curator of the musée Cognacq-Jay. In 1913 he secured a group of pastels and other works from the Béranger family, including a pastel by La Tour and another now in the Cognacq-Jay and two pastels by Pougin de Saint-Aubin as well as two Dutch landscapes; as a letter in the family archives reveals, the transaction involved a payment of 50,000 francs and the delivery of modern copies in exact reproduction frames to replace them. Jonas became a député in 1936.

Charles JONES (1760–1827), haberdasher, of Jermyn Street, acquired three pastels by John Russell (Smoaker Miles, Villiese, mabomet summy) at the artist's sale (possibly through Vallotton; although it was later claimed that he was given them by the artist); they passed to his widow, née Albertina Wilmot (1765–1830), and by 1894 they had descended to their great-grandson, Rev. Charles Percy Jones (1868–1942), The Limes, Stonebridge Park, Willesden, London, briefly rector of Westmill, Buntingford from 1898; he was separated from his wife in 1927, and lived in Twickenham with Mrs Lottie Smeed (1869–1955) to whose daughter, Mrs Marion G. Jackson, the pastels descended.

François JOULLAIN (1697–1778), Paris engraver, publisher, art dealer and auctioneer, active from c.1750 from a shop on the quai de la Megisserie. His stock, mainly of prints, was valued at 44,000 livres in 1762. His engravings included plates after Coypel pastels. His son Charles-François (1734–1790) supplied frames.

Charles JOURDIER de La Charnée (1839–1906), from Moulins (where his father was maire), and of 32 rue Michel Ange, Paris, was a donor to the musée départemental de l'Allier. He was a great-great-grandson of Joseph Jourdiere (1695–1749), docteur en Sorbonne, aumônier de la maison du roi. His collection included pictures by Corot and Millet, as well as two pastels which he left to the comte de Champfeu.

Pastels: Mme Roslin, Lemonnier; Éc. fr., Homme jouant de la viole

Antoine-Auguste-Jean JOUSSELIN (1792–1878), artiste peintre, économiste du musée du Louvre (since before 1829), active as a painter, exhibiting landscapes at the Paris salons 1834–42. He married Anne-Joséphine Fosse; their daughter Joséphine-Caroline (1827–1897) married Philibert-Joseph Moissenet, secretary to Horace de Viel Castel.

Jean de JULLIENNE [or Julienne] (1686–1766), director of the Gobelins; art collector, particularly associated with Watteau, many of whose works he had engraved by the Audrans, Boucher, Cochin etc. His contribution to the arts was recognised by the order of Saint-Michel (1736) and he became an honorary member of the Académie royale de peinture in 1740. Jullienne's artistic patronage also extended to pastellists: his inventory records a number of pastels by Mlle Natoire as well as by Alexis Loir, who also presented a bust of Jullienne to the Académie in 1781. A letter from Mlle Natoire (q.v.) to Mme Jullienne, née Marie-Louise de Brécécy de La Sémondière (1697–1778) implies that she shared her husband's tastes and in particular was interested in (and perhaps practised?) pastel. A manuscript illustrated Catalogue des tableaux de Mr de Jullienne, dating from c.1756, is in the Morgan Library, New York (inv. 1966.8), repr. in Tillerot 2010 and London 2011). Walpole viewed the collection on 18.XII.1765, noting "several Rosalbas" (Paris journal). A major sale, with 1679 lots, took place in 1767, and a further sale after the death of his widow in 1778. In addition, the index of the 1756 album contains a pastel of Mme de Jullienne la jeune by Vigée.

Rosalba CARRIERA

Lot 65: Les quatre Saisons représentées chacune par une demi-figure de fille jeune & aimable, avec des attributs qui les caractérisent: elles sont au pastel, qui est, comme tout le monde sait, un genre de peindre que cette célèbre Vénitienne possédoit supérieurement. Feu son Altesse Electorale de Cologne les lui a fait faire, & par conséquent on ne peut douter de la perfection de ces quatre morceaux. Ils sont sous glaces, & portent chacun 22 pouces de haut, sur 17 de large [1800 livres; Basan][36. Bazan. 1800lt. Ils avoient coté beaucoup davantage à M. de Julienne qui les avoit achetés sur la fin de sa vie. Mais cela ne fait pas un prix & je les trouvai remis à leur valeur car ce n'est pas ce qui me plaisoit le plus de la Rosalba.]

Lot 66: Rosalba Carriera elle-même, dans un âge avancé, coiffée en cheveux; elle tient un porte-crayon & une feuille de papier gris, sur laquelle est représentée le portrait d'une jeune fille [qui est la Zuanina soeur de la Rosalba]. Ce Tableau au pastel, qui est d'un empatement extraordinaire, vient encore du Cabinet de l'Electeur de Cologne: il porte 27 pouces de haut, sur 21 pouces 6 lignes de large [425 livres; Basan][22 V. Bazan. 425lt. C'est presqu'une repetition de celui qui est à Florence dans le Galerie du G.D]

Lot 67: Deux Bustes de femmes extrêmement gracieuses; elles ont chacune un bouquet de fleurs dans les cheveux. Ces deux morceaux fins sont sous glace: ils portent chacun 16 pouces de haut, sur 12 pouces 6 lignes de large [400 livres][34. 400lt.1. M. Rosalba les envoya M. de Julienne peu de temps apres son retour à Venise & me les adressa avec deux autres, quelle avoit dessinée pour M. Rigault. Il eut le choix & ne fut pas content.]

Lot 68: Le Buste d'une Dame, vue de face & peinte au pastel, sous glace qui

The German brothers Rodolphe (1845–1905) and Maurice (1839–1906) KANN established themselves in Paris in the nineteenth century; their fortune was based on South African gold and diamond mining. In 1907 Duveen acquired the entire Kann collection, described by Friedländer as “superior to all private galleries on the continent excepting, perhaps, that of Prince Liechtenstein in Vienna”. Their relative Alphonse (1870–1948), a British citizen after 1938, became an art collector and dealer in Paris before 1914, handling old master and impressionist paintings as well as antiquities and oriental and Far Eastern art. The 1927 sale contained a large collection of decorative art. Kann escaped to London during World War II, and his collections were seized by the ERR. Among his pastels was a Perronneau dame now in the Statens Museum, Copenhagen.

Wenzel Anton Fürst von KAUNITZ-RIETBERG (1711–1794), Austrian statesman. His francophile programme was complemented by an enlightened approach to the arts, which he saw as playing a significant political and economic role. He implemented this policy by establishing a Kupperstichakademie in 1766, which he then reorganised into the Akademie der bildenden Künste in 1772. His own collections were extensive, and were sold between 1820 and 1840. He owned pastels by Liotard (Karl von Lothringer; and family portraits). Gräfin von Kaunitz took drawing lessons from Lion in Vienna.

The Palazzo LABIA in Venice, with its sumptuous ballroom decorated by Tiepolo, was the demonstration to Venetian society of the wealth of a family of recent nobility. Maria Labia, reputedly portrayed by Rosalba, had an important collection of jewellery. Contessa Cecilia Labia, Milan, owned pastels by Tiepolo in 1911. Other collectors in this family included Princess Ida Louisa (1879–1961) and Count Natale Labia who inherited a collection from his grandfather, Sir Joseph Robinson, Bt (1840–1929).

Jean-Joseph de LABORDE (1724–1794), a financier who enjoyed Choiseul's support, was a patron of the arts. Of numerous properties, the château de Méréville is perhaps the most beautiful. Both he and his wife Rosalie-Claire de Nettine were the subject of numerous pastel portraits (Duceux, Roslin etc.). His son François (1761–1802) collected pictures, buying the duc d'Orléans's collection in 1791 before his emigration the following year. Some were sold to Jeremiah Harman, while the remaining collection was sold in 1803. The unrelated Jean-Benjamin de Laborde (1734–1793) was also a wealthy financier, his sister and brother-in-law François Fontaine de Cramayel commissioned a number of pastels.

Ange-Laurent de LA LIVE DE JULLY (1725–1779), introducteur des ambassadeurs, amateur artist, collector and patron. He was an honorary member of the Académie royale de peinture from 1754. His early allegiance to contemporary French art and enthusiasm for the neo-classical style were notable; they were reflected in the catalogue of his collection he had printed in 1764. Hébert's 1766 description of the pastels in the "petit cabinet" is also of particular interest.

He started to form an extensive collection of French eighteenth century drawings while ambassador to Spain, with help from Agnew's and comte Enrico Bosdari (known as Henri Brémont), an expert on eighteenth century drawings with a somewhat chequered history. The collection was of outstanding quality, and included over three hundred drawings by Fragonard alone. Laughlin built his home in Washington, Meridian House, in the Louis XVI style, and assisted in the planning of the West Building of the National Gallery of Art. His collection was preserved intact by his widow Therese Eselin Laughlin until her death in 1958, when it was inherited by their only child, Gertrude, who married Rear Admiral Hubert Chanler. Much of the collection was sold in 1959. Some of the remaining drawings were exhibited in the National Gallery of Art, Washington, in 1982.

Jean-Baptiste-Pierre LE BRUN (1748–1813), painter, dealer and auctioneer. Best known today as the husband of Mme Vigée Le Brun, his step-father Nicolas Le Rouge was also a painter and dealer, as was his younger brother Joseph-Alexandre Le Brun. Le Brun played a very active part of the Paris art market for some forty years from 1770, acting as agent to Louis XVI, the comte d'Artois and the duc d'Orléans, and conducting some 165 sales (a far smaller number were conducted by his brother, but it is not always clear which). His catalogues and writings were a significant development on previous standards. His own collection, which included a number of pastels, was dispersed in many sales. A description of his house in the rue de Cléry by Thiéry 1787 mentions, in the bedroom, “un beau pastel, par M. de La Tour” and “une tête, de Rosalba”.

Charles William FitzGerald, 4th Duke of LEINSTER (1819–1897). The core of the collection at Carton was formed by Lord St George from around 1763. After his death in 1775 it was moved to Leinster House and in 1815, on the sale of Leinster House, arrived at Carton. In 1874 the 4th Duke inherited the title and the numerous Irish pastels of the Fitzgerald and Lennox families. A catalogue was published in 1885: see below; it does not include three Russell pastels of children with dogs, listed by Williamson in 1894. By the time of the 1925 sale these had passed to Edward, 7th Duke (1892–1976), who had already disposed of his interest in Carton House to settle gambling debts.

Charles-François-de-Paule LE NORMANT DE TOURNEHEM (1684–1751), fermier général, uncle of the Charles-Guillaume-Borromée Le Normant d'Étiolles (1717–1799) who married Mme de Pompadour.

Tournehem had a major influence on the development of art in France in the period from 1745, when he succeeded Orry as directeur général des Bâtimens, until his death. He appointed the pastellist Charles Coypel to the revived position of premier peintre du roi. Details of his own collection are unknown.

Elvira “Biki” LEONARDI, Sig.ra Robert Bouyere (1906–1999), women’s clothes designer from Milan. She was the daughter of the first marriage of Puccini’s stepdaughter Fosca Leonardi, who later married Mario Crespi (1879–1962), the Milanese newspaper (Corriere della sera) and textile magnate; Biki inherited several pastels from his estate. Mario’s brother Aldo (1885–1978) also owned a Rosalba lady.

Rudolph LEPKE (1845–1904) founded the first German fine art auction house in 1869.

Alexandre-Jean-Joseph LE RICHE DE LA POUPLINIÈRE (1693–1762), fermier général, patron of the arts. His vast wealth allowed him to cultivate the arts on a magnificent scale, both at this hôtel in the rue Neuve-des-Petits-Champs and at Passy, where Mlle Fel, Jelyotte and Mme Van Loo sang in new work by Rameau and other composers. Forced by Fleury to marry his mistress, Thérèse Boutinon, her infidelity with the maréchal de Richelieu was notorious. La Tour’s portraits of these figures are among the most celebrated works in pastel. His iconography remains confusing (n. discussion in entry for J.46.2028); only the Vigée pastel of 1747 J.758.276 seems well founded. Apart from family portraits in pastel (several of which were reclaimed by his widow after his death), La Pouplinière purchased a pastel of an unidentified woman from the very obscure Marie-Françoise Coé, unpaid for at his death. According to Dumesnil, Histoire des plus célèbres amateurs, La Pouplinière was an amateur painter and draughtsman; some of his work was bought by prince Galitzin.

Nicolas LE ROUGE ou Lerouge (1752–1827), peintre de l’Académie de Saint-Luc en 1782, marchand de tableaux, négociant, rue de Cléry. Like other members of his family he was a receveur de lotterie. In 1773 he married Françoise Bouffé (c.1720–1787), widow of Pierre Le Brun and mother-in-law of Mme Vigée Le Brun. Le Rouge acted as partner of his son-in-law J.-B.-P. Le Brun at a number of sales. He purchased two Rosalba pastels now in Dijon at the 1794 sale organised by Le Brun, and appears to have owned a Fragonard pastel in 1773. Two pastels by Pillement were recorded in Mme Le Rouge’s posthumous inventory, .v.1787, valued at 60 livres.

Jean-François LE ROY de Senneville (1715–1784), fermier général 1772–80. He married a daughter of Jarente d’Orgeval, and was thus brother-in-law of Grimod de La Reynière. His sale in Paris, Chariot, Paillet, 5–11.IV.1780 included pastels by Briard, Greuze and Hall, while his posthumous sale (Paris, Commandeur, Paillet, 26.IV.1784) included “28 pastels” according to Durand 1971, p. 536: one each by Hall and Boucher, as well as 2 Fragonard drawings and numerous other glazed drawings.

Robert M. LIGHT (1929–2016) founded R. M. Light & Co., Inc., in 1956, dealing in engravings and drawings, first in Boston, and from 1977 in Santa Barbara.

Le prince Charles-Joseph-Antoine-Lamoral-Ghislain de LIGNE (1759–1792), son of the celebrated prince de Ligne (1735–1814), formed a very large collection of old master drawings, many of which he acquired through the dealer Julien de Parme from French collections such as that of Mariette. Prince Charles engraved a number of these sheets himself. The collection was auctioned after his death by Bartsch. Some 800 of the drawings were acquired by Albert Casimir August von Sachsen-Teschen, and are now in the Albertina. The sale excluded the framed pictures and a few specific bequests, including a portrait of his wife left to his daughter Sidonie “afin qu’elle se ressouvienne de ne pas l’imiter.”

Jean-Étienne LIOTARD (1702–1789), pastellist, was also an active collector of old master paintings, assembled for prestige rather than study. Apart from a number of his own works, he seems only to have acquired pastels by two artists: Carriera (an unidentified Diana) and Caroline Luise von Baden. His son Jean-Étienne Liotard-Crommelin (1758–1822) assembled numerous pastels belonging to his father in Amsterdam, forming the nucleus of the Rijksmuseum's holding. Two exhibitions (Paris 1771, London 1773 - n. Exhibitions) displayed his collection of old master paintings together with a number of his own works. They were followed by a sale at Christie's over two days (lot numbers repeated on second day; the Christie's copy is annotated with what seem to be estimates beside some of the lots, and interleaved with results; those without purchasers' names are designated b/i below). Eleven years later, Liotard tried to sell 53 pieces from his collection to the French crown, and the Liste de mes meilleurs tableaux sent to d'Angiviller provides further detail on a number of his pastels.

299: Boucher: Le portrait d'une jolie Demoiselle tenant un chardonneret. On voit dans ce tableau le travail d'une couleur libre et franche et un dessin coulant et agréable, pastel, Hauteur 15 pouces, largeur 12 pouces.

300: Chardin: Son portrait peint par lui-même, en bonnet de nuit, et portant lunette; ce portrait est d'une touche savante, d'une couleur fraîche et d'une vérité étonnante, pastel, Hauteur 16 pouces, largeur 13 pouces [=?Orléans version, R&T 194A]

301: Une tête d'un Monsieur portant perruque, et faisant pendant à celui de M. Chardin. Hauteur 16 pouces, largeur 13 pouces.

302: Une copie au Pastel du Bénédictin, tableau dont l'original est dans le cabinet du Duc de Praslin, 19 pouces, 25 pouces.

303: M. Vigée: Le portrait d'une jolie Dame, vêtue d'une robe bleue, avec un noeud de ruban et un bouquet. Ce portrait est frais et agréable, pastel, Hauteur 24 pouces, largeur 20 pouces.

304: Elisabeth Le Brun: Un beau tableau au pastel, représentant l'Innocence, se réfugiant dans les bras de la Justice ; ce tableau fait honneur à la célébrité de Mde. leBrun, et lui a servi pour son agrément à l'académie. Ce suprême morceau doit être regardé comme l'ouvrage le plus parfait de cette aimable peintre ; elle est la Rosalba de notre École, et on retrouve ici tout à la fois une touche vigoureuse et spirituelle, les graces dans la composition, et un ensemble séduisant et flatteur qui caractérise vraiment les chefs-d'oeuvres, pastel, Hauteur 37 pouces, largeur 47 pouces 6 lignes.

305: D'après Mde. Le Brun: Son portrait peint par elle-même, en buste de grandeur naturelle, elle s'est représentée au moment qu'on entre dans son appartement, elle tourne la tête pour regarder, et en même temps, elle veut cacher une lettre qu'elle écrit. Ce charmant portrait est d'une ressemblance parfaite et d'un mouvement qui fait illusion, joint à un coloris aimable et frais, pastel, Hauteur 30 pouces, largeur 24 pouces

306: M. Le Noir: Une portrait de femme en buste de grandeur naturelle, ayant l'épaule et le sein découvert et un bras appuyé sur un livre qui est sur une table, et de l'autre main tenant un masque; un costume élégant et un coloris frais et séduisant, font le mérite de ce portrait, pastel, Hauteur 30 pouces, largeur 24 pouces.

307: M. Le Noir: Une jolie tête de femme peinte agréablement, vue un peu plus que profil, pastel, Hauteur 17 pouces, largeur 14 pouces.

308: Anon.: Un cupidon assis sur un nuage, vu par derriere, tenant son carquois, avec une draperie rouge, pastel, Hauteur 19 pouces, largeur 23 pouces.

309: Rabillon: Portrait en buste d'une jolie femme, un ruban bleu à la tête, un mouchoir de gaze artistement arrangé, un corset blas; Hauteur 21 pouces, largeur 17 pouces. Il est de forme ovale.

310: Un jeune garçon en buste de grandeur naturelle, faisant des bules [sic] de savon. Ce tableau est peint d'après Grimoux, il est d'un bon effet de lumiere, pastel, Hauteur 24 pouces, largeur 20 pouces.

311: M. Watteau, Fils: Ce tableau représente une assemblée dans un salon ; on y voit une compagnie de Dames assises à l'entour d'une table, où il y en a une qui s'occupe à tirer les cartes, on y remarque des Messieurs, et un petit enfant qui s'amuse. Ce tableau est d'une jolie couleur, et les figures sont bien costumées, pastel, Hauteur 30 pouces, largeur 36 pouces

312: Anon.: Deux tableaux au pastel, représentant deux paysages, dans l'un on y voit une riviere et un moulin à eau avec de jolies fabriques, et plusieurs figures enrichissent ce morceau, pastel.

313: D'après la Rozalba. Son portrait tenant d'une main une tête dessinée sur papier, et de l'autre un porte crayon, on y voit sur un coin de table quelques crayons de pastel, Hauteur 28 pouces, largeur 22 pouces

314: Deux tableaux faisant pendans; l'un représente le buste d'une jolie femme, le sein découvert, tenant un pigeon blanc. L'autre représente une jolie femme peinte en buste, tenant des fleurs dans une draperie bleue : ces deux charmants pastels sont d'une finesse et d'une fraîcheur admirable ; ils sont attribués à M. Vivien, pastel, Hauteur 23 pouces, largeur 18 pouces.

315: D'après Grimoux. Deux charmants pastels, faisant pendans, l'un représente une jolie femme peinte en buste avec un voile noir, ayant une main appuyée sur une chaise. L'autre représente le buste d'une jolie brune costumée à l'espagnole, avec une canne à la main. Ces deux tableaux sont d'un ton de couleur chaud et savant, la touche en est ferme et vigoureuse, et d'un effet de lumiere agréable, pastel, Hauteur 24 pouces, largeur 20 pouces.

316: M. Watteau, Fils: Un tableau ovale représentant un malade dans un lit, & plusieurs Demoiselles, occupées à le servir ; et à la porte de la chambre, on y voit le Médecin qui s'entretient de la maladie avec un Monsieur. Ce tableau est bien composé, ovale pastel, Hauteur 21 pouces, largeur 17 pouces.

Un autre tableau ovale, et faisant pendant au précédent ; il représente une compagnie de Dames, dans un jardin ; on y voit un jeune homme qui trouve un nid d'oiseaux. L'effet est agréable ; la couleur en est fraîche : il a d'hauteur 21 pouces, largeur 17 pouces, ovale pastel, Hauteur 21 pouces, largeur 17 pouces.

Jean-Baptiste Gérard de La Pinte de LIVRY, dit Gérard de Livry (1704–Versailles 24.XI.1771), avocat au parlement, premier commis du duc de La Vrillière et du comte de Saint-Florentin (not to be confused with Louis Sanguin, comte de Livry), from Toulouse. His son was Paul-François Gérard de Livry (1746–1819), mousquetaire, maître-d'hôtel de la comtesse de Provence 1771. Jean-Baptiste obtained letters patent to commute the name de La Pinte to de Livry in 1748). According to Wille, he was an "amateur et connoisseur dans les arts, vertueux et honnête homme." He and his wife were both portrayed by Tocqué, as was his father Nicolas La Pinte de Livry and brother, Nicolas, Mgr de Livry (1715–1795), évêque de Callinique, a collector of medals, prints and pictures, including several drawings by Greuze; he corresponded with Wille concerning the price of three pictures by Méréelle. Jean-Baptiste's posthumous sale at Versailles, 13–20.I.1772, contained pastels by Boucher, Hallé and Lozanne.

Marchese Girolamo MANFRIN (–1802), art collector. He made his fortune with a monopoly in tobacco in Dalmatia, and acquired the Palazzo Venier, Venice, in 1787, where he assembled a collection of more than 450 pictures (including important paintings by El Greco, Giorgioni, Titian, Cimabue, Reni, Giulio Romano, Lotto and Andrea del Sarto) with advice from Pietro Edwards and Giovanni Battista Mignardi. He owned four Rosalbas (an Inverno and three donne) according to the catalogue of his collection published by abate Nicoletti in 1872. The collection passed to his children Pietro and Giulia, who married marchese Giovanni Battista Plattis, and was dispersed at auctions from 1851 until the final sale in Venice, 24–25.V.1897. His bank was found to be insolvent, and his art collection, valued at some 13 million guilders, was seized by creditors and mostly acquired by the German authorities. Among works by Chardin, Fragonard, Watteau etc. was a pastel by La Tour, Crébillon.

Sir Alexander Hume, 2nd Earl of MARCHMONT and Baron Polwarth (1676–1740), KT: commissioned a group of pastels by Birochon of the delegates to the Cambrai conference 1721–25. These were sold in 1912 to James Swinton, and appeared at auction from 1979.

Part of the collection was sold in two sales after François-Martial's death; the part inherited by Camille (who was conservateur du musée de Chartres) was dispersed in 1876, while that inherited by Eudoxe (who was conservateur du musée des Beaux-Arts d'Orléans) remained in the family into the late twentieth century, through his daughter Marie-Françoise-Eudoxie (1850–1917), Mme Henry Jahan. Her daughter Geneviève (1875–1895) married Pierre Chévrier (1865–1938, indicated by the initials M.C. in B&W in 1928). A number of records from around this period refer, presumably with intentional imprecision, to M. & Mme Chévrier-Marcille.

Mme Blanche MARCY, a painter and antiques dealer of Bedford Square, supplied a set of four pastels by Boucher, representing the Four Arts, to the Leeds banker, MP and art collector, Ernest Beckett (later Lord Grimthorpe), for £1450, in 1897. He subsequently refused to pay, and proceedings took place in the Queen's Bench Division; Mme Marcy was represented by Marshall Hall. Beckett relied on an opinion from Féral, who initially thought they were contemporary works, but he could not be sure that they were painted by Boucher; subsequently he stated that they were not genuine. The court heard also the opinion of Charles Davis (endorsed by C. Agnew) who had never heard of any pastels by Boucher and valued the set at £150. Blanche was in fact the daughter of a Paris antiques dealer, Mme Filieuse-Marcy, and married a Spanish historicist painter, Ignacio Léon y Escosura (1834–1901); she became the mistress of an Italian anarchist and forger, Luigi Parmeggiani (1860–1945), who called himself Louis Marcy. He was responsible for numerous apparently mediaeval objects found in many museums. There is no evidence that he made the “Boucher” pastels.

Pierre-Jean MARIETTE (1694–1774), collector. Fourth generation in a family of publishers and booksellers in the rue Saint-Jacques, Paris, Pierre-Jean studied drawing and engraving. He was associated with the comte de Caylus, Crozat, Jullienne and Watteau, as well as with European correspondents such as Gabburri and Zanetti, and he was among those who welcomed Rosalba Carriera to Paris in 1720–21. His notes on artists were later published as Abécédario (1851–60). Mariette's extensive collection of approximately 10,000 drawings, many with distinguished provenances, was offered to the king at his death, but the price could not be agreed and it was broken up at auction. A copy of the sale catalogue was annotated by Gabriel de Saint-Aubin. A Dossier des acquisitions du roi (AN O 1913, 4) records the sheets bought for the crown, while others were acquired by collectors such as the prince de Conti or Randon de Boisset. The reconstruction is currently being undertaken by the Association Mariette; the first two volumes, covering the French school, appeared in 2011 (numbers [F/n] below). Mariette's uncle Denis was also a picture collector, but only one pastel (a family portrait) was in his 1741 inv. p.m.

La princesse MATHILDE (1820–1904), Napoléon's niece, daughter of Jérôme Bonaparte. In 1840 she married Anatole Nikolaievich Demidov, prince de San Donato (q.v.), but they were separated in 1848. In that year her cousin Louis-Napoléon was elected president and she held court at the Élysée palace; subsequently she lived in the rue de Courcelles and the rue de Berri where "elle accueillait tous ses visiteurs avec un sansfaçon qui était l'extrême raffinement de la condescendance et de la politesse" (Abel Hermant). These visitors were the leading figures of the worlds of art, literature and science. She was herself an amateur artist, although her efforts and connoisseurship were disparaged by the Goncourt brothers, who noted that her atelier was "encombré de ces choses qui ne sont des objets d'art que pour les femmes, un faux pastel de Boucher, de faux pastels de Chardin." (Journal, 10.XII.1852). She also owned an oil by Perronneau, said to be of Laurent Cars, and a miniature after La Tour's autoportrait au jabot.

Alphonse MENNECHET DE BARIVAL (1812–1903) married his (third) cousin Henriette-Caroline Paillet (1813–1861), a gifted pianist and composer and granddaughter of the auctioneer A.-J. Paillet (q.v.). In 1880 he had constructed the pseudo-renaissance château Mennechet in Chiry-Ourscamp intended to be a museum to house his collection of pictures, sculpture and faïence, but the project was incomplete at his death, and the château was destroyed by bombing during the 1914–18 war. He left four pastels to Saint-Quentin (initially housed in the Palais de Fervaques, as noted in the 1914 edition of Baedeker, Le Nord-Est de la France, later transferred to the musée Antoine Lécuyer) which came (through his wife) from the disastrous La Tour sale run by A.-J. Paillet; Paillet's son Charles (1780–1848) appears already to have left them to the ville de Saint-Quentin with a usufruct to his daughter and son-in-law. In a private letter to Maurice Tourneux of 18.IX.1904, Élie Fleury called Mennechet "un vieux filou", explaining that he "vient de laisser à la ville de Saint-Quentin les copies infâmes qu'il n'avait pas pu vendre à des Américains pour des originaux". His brother was the administrator Félix-Alexandre Mennechet (q.v., Suppliers). Five pastels are listed in his testament of 24.VI.1903, but only four were left to Saint-Quentin and listed in the inv. p.m. of 29.X.1903; the fifth was later acquired.

Charles-François-René MESNARD DE CLESLE or de La Claye (1732–1803), commandeur des ordres de Saint-Louis et de Notre-Dame de Mont-Carmel. A former maréchal de camp de cavalerie, he was appointed gouverneur et lieutenant du roi dans le Pays de Soule before 1769, but his poor health prevented his being invested, and he remained in Paris. During the Revolution he was briefly imprisoned (his brother, the comte de Chousy, and nephew were executed), and deposed that his income came mainly from the sale of pictures and furniture. He collected French and Dutch pictures, including Boucher, Chardin and Fragonard. A pastel by Hall was sold in Paris, Boileau, 4.XII.1786 & seq., Lot 118. The catalogue for his posthumous sale listed among his collection of “curiosités” a large number of drawings and miniatures. They were sold from his brother’s former home. Charles-Edmond MITANTIER (1817–1887), notary and bibliophile: his widow donated an important collection of early printed books to the bibliothèque municipale de Troyes. The musée des Beaux-Arts received a group of six pastels by Petit de Villeneuve.

James MITCHELL (1752–1806), of Richmond Hill, Surrey, “gone to Jamaica”, leading to a sale on 4.XI.1803 by Mr Winstanley on the premises, advertised in the Morning chronicle (31.X.1803) and including “a small but well chosen Collection of Painting, Drawings in Crayons etc.” He was born in Kilmadock, Perth; Receiver-General of Jamaica and a Member of Assembly for the parish of Vere in 1805. He was married to Martha Delpratt.

La comtesse André MNISZECH, née Anna Potocka (1827–1885), first wife (married 1849) of the Polish émigré painter and portraitist Andrzej Mniszek (1823–1905). A number of Marteau pastels of members of the Mniszech or Potocki families were in her posthumous sale; others were recorded by Fournier-Sarlovèze in 1906. Some were also dispersed at the posthumous sales of the collections of her son Leon Mniszech (1849–1901), an enthusiastic art collector and founder member of the Red Cross. His collection included several Marteau pastels that had belonged to Stanislaw August; some of it is now in Warsaw.

Toussaint-Eugène-Ernest MOCKER (1811–1895), singer and professeur, de l’Opéra-Comique, owned a version of Perronneau’s Van Robais.

Sir John Rawdon, 1st Earl of MOIRA (1720–1793), FRS, Dilettanti 1741; the subject of portraits by Knaption, Pond and (in pastel) Charles Martin. According to Twiss 1776, p. 23, his collection included “a few portraits in crayons, by Rosalba”. They may well have been purchased in Italy, for he was recorded in Venice in 1740. Lady Mary Wortley Montagu noted that “he us’d to purchase Pictures in Italy: not because he wanted to buy, but because somebody or other wanted to sell.” (letter, 22.VI.1752). His son, later Marquess of Hastings (1754–1826), bought Mosnier’s oil portrait of the chevalier d’Éon, and had a copy made by Thomas Stewart.

His rare book collection began after his father's death in 1890, and now forms the Morgan Library housed in a building he constructed in 1900. In the next 13 years he formed one of the largest collections of highly prized works of art, including in particular English and French eighteenth century paintings. Pastels by Russell, The Topham family, and La Tour, Mme de Mondonville, were shipped from London to New York in 1912; the latter passed to J. P. Morgan's daughter Anne (1873–1952). The collections were mostly inherited by Morgan's son John Pierpont Morgan, Jr (1867–1943), of Wall End, Aldenham, Hertfordshire, but parts were disposed of during his lifetime (for example the miniatures were sold by Christie's, 24.VI.1935), while others, including a second Russell (Reynolds), were sold in his posthumous sale at London, Christie's, 31.III.1944. He also owned two more Russells: Edward Topham and Mrs Millward, as well as a Sharples pastel of Washington. The old master drawings collection which was acquired from Charles Fairfax Murray remains in the Morgan Library (v. Collections). Morgan's sister, Mary Lyman Morgan (1844–1919), who married the banker Walter Hayes Burns, owned a large group of Gardner pastels, many acquired from Agnew's; they passed to her daughter, Mary Ethel, Viscountess Harcourt (1874–1961). Williamson 1921 listed some two dozen as with Viscount Harcourt.

Charles-Jean-Baptiste Fleuriau, comte de MORVILLE (1686–1732), de l'Académie française, diplomate, statesman and collector. The son of Fleuriau d'Armenonville, he was ambassador to Holland before being appointed ministre de la Marine 1722, des Affaires étrangères 1723–27. He was protecteur de l'Académie de Bordeaux. He owned the celebrated Carriera pendants (inv. p.m., 8.III.1732, AN MC CXV 476); soon after his death they graced the cabinet of Jean de Boullongne, and are now in Dijon. A third femme qui tient un chat was probably by her as well. His collection was left to his widow, née Charlotte-Élizabeth de Vienne (1687–1761); inv. p.m., 7.I.1762; it also included two pastels by Coypel, Marouille; L'Amour précepteur. Mme Paul-Joseph-Emile MOTTART, née Laure-Anna-Marie-Henriette Bonehill (1881–1944), 6 Rond-Point des Champs-Élysées, Paris, the widow of a Belgian industrialist, left an important Manet and two Pillement pastels to the Louvre in 1945.

Lady MOUNT STEPHEN, née Georgina Tufnell (1864–1933), of Brocket Hall, Lady-in-Waiting to the Duchess of Teck. Owned two pastels by J. R. Smith, which later belonged to Lady Holford.

Louis-Gustave MÜHLBACHER (1834–1907), carrossier, industrialist and art collector. The Mühlbacher coach business was founded in Paris in 1797 by a carrossier from Strasbourg, and it became one of the most prestigious coach-makers in Paris, supplying Napoléon III and royal families across Europe.

Neilson's inventaire après décès was carried out 8.III.1787 (AN mc/et/cix/805); among numerous pictures was "un grand Tableau chantré représentant la famille de Vivien dans sa bordure de bois sculpté et doré" (19 livres 4); a Vivien self-portrait, also in oil (14 livres 8); and "onze portraits au pastel par Vivien et autres sous verres dans leurs bordures" valued at 64 livres. There were a further "six études au pastel sous verres" (12 livres).

Quite a number of the pictures were by or after Boucher. Neither Neilson's own pastels nor the La Tour autoportrait he owned was explicitly mentioned.

Jan Izaak. de NEUFVILLE BRANTS (1768–1807), Amsterdam, grandson of the Amsterdam collector Jan Isaac de Neufville (1706–1772), of Herengracht 130. His major collection of Dutch pictures was inherited by the banker Jan Jacob Brants, who married Anna Maria de Neufville (1742–1813). A number of Troost pastels from the de Bruijn collection were with J. S. de Neufville Brants in 1829, and may have been acquired by Jan Izaak c.1798.

Ludwig NEUMANN (1859–1934), of 11 Grosvenor Square, London, of Bavarian origin (brother of Sir Sigismund Neumann, Bt), prominent banker in the firm of L. Hirsch & Co. (associated with Jacques de Gunzburg), racehorse owner and picture collector. Following the Wall Street crash, some of his collection was sold by Christie's, 2-4.VII.1919, but he was still able to come to the aid of his nephew, the modern art dealer Daniel-Henry Kahnweiler. Neumann owned a small Russell pastel head.

Pol-Louis NEVEUX (1865–1939), romancier, inspecteur général des bibliothèques de France. He lent a La Tour inconnue (Mme Masse, J.46.2349) to the Paris 1927a exhibition. His widow bequeathed some French XVIII^e furniture to the musée des Beaux-Arts in his native Reims, and his large collection of sale catalogues is now in the bibliothèque municipale.

Lady Dorothy NEVILL, née Walpole (1826–1913), of 45 Charles Street, Berkeley Square, daughter of Horatio Walpole, 3rd Earl of Orford. She was a collector of plants and pictures (particularly anything related to Horace Walpole), and a well-known salonnière, entertaining politicians and society figures with her finely honed conversation. Her son Ralph edited her memoirs. Her collection included three pastels of members of the Walpole family said to be by Carriera; there were also a pair of copies after Greuze, and four anonymous pastels of unknown sitters. The supposed Perronneau which she sold to Duveen, now in the National Gallery, was acquired by her husband, her cousin Reginald Henry Nevill (1807–1878), who “was very fond of pastels and bought at a time when they were not valued as they are now.” “Two pastels by Perronneau of the same lady in different positions” also appear as purchases from her in Duveen’s stockbooks from 1902 on, while Agnew’s bought a Labille-Guiard (princesse de Lamballe) in 1899. Opigez’s collection of (mainly theatrical) portraits included a pastel by Borne (Diderot, donated to the Comédie-Française). He also owned a miniature purporting to be La Tour’s self-portrait, but probably a copy of the autoportrait au jabot, as well as a La Tour portrait said to be of his brother, medium unspecified.

Orford, v. Walpole

Philippe, duc d'ORLÉANS (1674–1723), regent during the minority of Louis XV, started his collection while duc de Chartres. He is said to have learned painting from Antoine Coyvel, an artist whom he employed to decorate the Palais-Royal which housed the Orléans collection and where Rosalba Carriera was welcomed on her trip to Paris in 1720–21. On Coyvel's death in 1722 his son Charles was appointed premier peintre du duc d'Orléans. The next duc, Louis (1703–1752), supported Nattier, while his son Louis-Philippe (1725–1785) was particularly interested in architecture. His son Philippe-Égalité (1747–1793) succeeded to the title at a time of political and financial turmoil, and in 1790 he asked James Christie to purchase the Orléans paintings collection for 100,000 guineas. In the event the pictures passed through the hands of a Belgian banker, then to Laborde (q.v.) before being sold in a difficult market in London over the next decade. Many of the family portraits were left. Vatout's catalogue includes a number of pastels, listed below (PR refers to the Palais Royal).

Paul-Émile-Marius PAULME (1863–1928), one of the most influential experts in French eighteenth century drawings. He formed the largest single collection of drawings by J.-A.-M. Lemoine, having “une particulière prédilection” for this artist. Gimpel commented dismissively of the “prix énormes pour ces petites cochonneries” in the 1923 sale. His main sale, in 1929, included a small number of pastels, one of which (Perronneau, d'Aubais) is visible on the wall in his study (10, rue Chauchat) in a contemporary photograph. The reviewer in L'Art vivant (1929, p. 458) considered that the collection epitomised “l'apothéose du goût et de la perspicacité?”. A further sale took place in 1949 after the death of his widow, née Léontine-Marie-Marguerite Barjot (1869–1948).

Galerie Georges PETIT, Paris. Established as a picture dealer in 1846 by François-André Petit (1817–1878), it was taken over by his son Georges (1856–1920) in 1877. Its spacious premises were at 8, rue de Sèze, and numerous prestigious auctions were held there in preference to the Hôtel Drouot. After Petit's death, the business was continued (by Étienne Bignon and Gaston and Josse Bernheim-Jeune) until it finally closed in 1933.

Louis PETIT DE BACHAUMONT (1690–1771), writer and critic, with a particular interest in art. He was Crozat's executor, a friend of Charles Coypel and a supporter of Boucher, and his views on the administration of the arts were regularly submitted to the surintendants des Bâtimens and others. His lasting monument is the series of Mémoires secrets which were continued by several other writers after his death. In his salon critiques he showed a decided preference for La Tour, who had exhibited his portrait, over Perronneau. In 1748 he expressed concern over the longevity of pastels, and recommended they be fixed using La Tour's secret method.

Cardinale Carlo PIO DI SAVOIA (1622–1689), a member of a Roman family which formed one of the great private art collections in the 17th century. Apart from 126 old master paintings which remained in Rome and are now in the Capitoline Museum, Prince Gilberto moved most of the collection to Madrid in the middle of the 18th century. A few pictures and a large collection of furniture and objets were disposed of from the estate of Princess Pio De Savoia in a series of sales in London c.2000.

Jacques PINGAT (–1751), peintre de l'Académie de Saint-Luc, and art dealer in Paris, sur le pont au Change, à l'enseigne du roi d'Espagne. He was the son of Pierre Pingat (c.1657–1719), also a painter. He was associated with Gersaint, and employed Pierre Rémy, the leading expert of the next generation. His stock was inventoried after the death of his wife, Catherine de Mortain, in 1733, and again after his own, 2.IV.1751; his heir was his brother, Michel Pingat. The 1751 inventory contained “son portrait au pastel” and “un autre portrait du même”.

Eugene PINTO (1854–1932), of Grosvenor House, Park Lane, stockbroker, Pinto, Montagu, Oppenheim & Co, owner of a cinema chain; his daughter married James de Rothschild. He owned pastels by Huet and Liotard; the latter, inherited by his grandson George Richard Pinto (1929–2018), is now in the National Gallery.

Gérard PIOGEY (1820–1894), docteur en médecin, officier de la Légion d'honneur. A voracious collector of all things XVIII^e, he owned pastels by La Tour, Perronneau and Lion.

Eugène PIOT (1812–1890), art historian, archaeologist and collector with wide ranging interests. Of greatest interest is his acquisition in Venice in 1852 of works from the workshop of Rosalba Carriera; the collection was sold at auction in Paris, Drouot, 31.III.1856, in 58 lots. The first group of 43 lots are described as pastel (there are separate groups for miniatures and drawings), and while it is impossible to form a proper assessment of so many works which have subsequently disappeared, it would appear that there are numerous repetitions of works such as the Ragazza tirolese. Some of these may have been bought in, as they probably reappeared in a posthumous sale, 21–24.V.1890. That sale included one further Rosalba, self-portrait, acquired in Venice in 1865.

Robert S. PIRIE (1934–2015), lawyer and bibliophile. His collections of 16th and 17th century English literature, furniture, silver, ceramics and pictures were sold at Sotheby's, New York, .XII.2015 - .I.2016. Pastels by Gardner and Boucher.

General Augustus Henry Lane Fox-PITT-RIVERS, né Lane Fox (1827–1900), soldat, archéologue, ethnologue et collectionneur, changé son nom quand il succéda à son grand-oncle's estate in 1880. His grandson, George Henry Lane Fox-Pitt-Rivers (1890–1966), of Hinton St Mary, Dorset, capitaine, Royal Dragoons, sold several pastels following his father's death, at Christie's, 1929. They included a Cotes lady and a Perronneau, inconnu 1772.

Camille PLANTEVIGNES (1858–1955), a wealthy tie-maker; collector, particularly of silver; he also owned drawings by Saint-Aubin and Carle Van Loo. Proust challenged him to a duel over some remarks made by his son Marcel Plantevignes.

Jean-Baptiste POIXMENU (1735–1784), marchand mercier, maître peintre and picture dealer in Paris, rue Saint-André-des-Arts, active from c.1770. His brother Abel-François was a marchand-mercier in the Palais-Royal. His posthumous inventory reveals a large number (4691) of low-value pictures, consistent with the annotation of “brocanteur” in several sale catalogues from 1779 on. Two pastels attributed to La Tour and one by an unknown Mme Volette appeared in these sales. The pastellist Jean-Gabriel Montjoye was one of the friends who appeared in a family conference in 1785 over the tuition of his minor son (his wife was Marie-Louise-Françoise Coulon).

La princesse Edmond de POLIGNAC, née Winnaretta Singer (1865–1943), heiress to the Singer sewing machine fortune, amateur artist and early enthusiast for Manet. She married first prince Louis de Scey-Montbéliard and then, in 1893, entered into a “mariage blanc” with prince Edmond de Polignac (1834–1901), companion of comte Robert de Montesquiou and an amateur composer. Their salon at 3 rue Cortambert, Paris was particularly important musically, with new works performed by composers from Fauré to Poulenc; it is now the seat of the Fondation Singer-Polignac. Edmond's nephew comte Jean de Polignac (1888–1943), owner of a La Tour autopotrait, married the daughter of the dress designer Jeanne Lanvin; they too were actively interested in music and art, supporting Poulenc in particular. A sale of Souvenirs de Mme Lanvin et de sa fille, la comtesse Jean de Polignac (Paris, Drouot, Damien Libert, 8.XII.2008) included a number of anonymous pastels. Thérèse, princesse de Polignac (1916–2014) married Pedro de Barros in 1948; she owned a Vigée Le Brun pastel (duchesse de Guiche). The Vigée Le Brun pastels of the two Polignac children were also in the family until 2004. Frederick POLLARD (1826–1916), dealer, of 16 Pantou Street; he purchased pastels by J. H. Benwell, Hamilton and Russell at auction. The posthumous sale of his stock took place at Christie's, 27.XI.1916.

L'abbé François-Emmanuel POMMYER (1713–1784), honoraire amateur de l'Académie royale de peinture, collector of paintings by Chardin, friend of La Tour and Cochin. A number of family portraits by Largillière descended via Charles Theurier-Pommyer (1800–1876) to the Jacquier de Rosée family before appearing at auction in London, Christie's, 10.XII.1993.

La marquise de POMPADOUR, née Jeanne-Antoinette Poisson (1721–1764). She became mistress of Louis XV in 1745, and played a central role in the arts for the rest of her life. Her protector Le Normant de Tournehem (she was married to his nephew) was appointed directeur général des bâtiments in 1745, and her brother, the marquis de Marigny, succeeded him in 1751. She was an amateur engraver, an activity alluded to in La Tour's monumental portrait of her in the Louvre. In view of her enlightened interest, it is perhaps surprising that there were few pastels in her own collection.

William Bentinck, 2nd Duke of PORTLAND (1709–1762) married Lady Margaret Cavendish Harley (1715–1785), one of the most avid collectors of both fine art and natural history. Her posthumous sale (London, Skinner, 24.IV.–8.VI.1786) lasted 38 days, and included the Portland Vase now in the British Museum. The remaining collections, exhibited at the Harley Gallery at Welbeck, are particularly rich in portrait miniatures. The Bentinck family commissioned pastels from artists from Pond to Perronneau. The Duchess of Northumberland's diary for 29.V.1760 describes pastels seen at Bulstrode, including portraits of Lord Tichfield, Lady Juliana Penn, Lady Weymouth and Lady Harriet Bentinck, probably by Pond and Read.

Nicolas-Joseph Marcassus, baron de PUYMAURIN (1718–1791), syndic-général des États de Languedoc, was the son of a capitoul de Toulouse who had made his money from the Manufacture royale de draps established in Toulouse in 1698 with the encouragement of Colbert. At its height the business employed nearly 3000 people, many of them from the Low Countries. The baron became a passionate art collector, supporting local artists such as Rivalz and Gamelin (whose trip to Rome he sponsored) and protecting the salon de Toulouse (to which he lent a pastel by Despax). His brother-in-law was the scientist Antoine Darquier de Pellepox, while his son Jean-Pierre-Casimir (1757–1841) was also a collector. His daughter Julie, Mme de Faye, exhibited a pastel at the 1773 exhibition.

Louis QUENTIN DE LORANGERE ou Lorangère (c.1678–1743), bourgeois de Paris, principal commis au greffe en chef au Châtelet, patron and collector. His cabinet of curiosities included shells (which he had bought from Gersaint in 1737), maps and prints as well as an important collection of Flemish paintings, and the catalogue by Gersaint advanced the standards of description. His wife, Madeleine-Charlotte Massé, may have been a cousin of La Tour. Four minor children survived his death.

Robert QUESNEY (1736–1811), marchand de tableaux, 5 rue Bergère, Paris; bought pastels by Boucher, Rosalba, Greuze and Hall at Paris sales in the 1770s. He was married twice: in 1773 (divorced 1793) to Barbe-Francoise Bellanger; and in 1797 to Anne-Marie Krauth. Their son Auguste was a joaillier-bijoutier.

Jean-Frédéric QUILLIET (Paris 28.II.1773 - p.1832), négociant, marchand d'art, from Paris. In 1801 he married Caroline de Berlaymont in Jarzé. In the early 1800s he was the French commissaire des beaux-arts in Spain, compiling a Dictionnaire des peintres espagnols (of which numerous copies were included in the 1818 sale). He was later consul in Ancona in Italy (c.1831), and corresponded with Stendhal. The 1818 sale followed his bankruptcy. Lot 239 was a version of Pajou's bust of Mme Vigée Le Brun.

Sir Cuthbert QUILTER, 1st Bt (1841–1911), MP for Sudbury, collector, son of a wealthy accountant. His collection was exhibited at Lawrie's Galleries, Bond Street, in 1902, and a volume entitled Sir Cuthbert Quilter's pictures.

London collection was issued [n.d.]. Fearing the effects of Lloyd George's supertax, he disposed of his house at 74 South Audley Street (which was connected via his picture gallery to 28 South Street); much of his collection of British and old master paintings was sold at Christie's on 10.VII.1909, yielding £88,000. It included two Humphry pastels, one of them Baron Nagel's servant, described as "an African prince, painted by order of the English government of the day"; it fetched 34 gns. His wife, née Mary Anne Bevington (1841–1927), was probably the owner of the Luti pastel sold in 2013. The composer Roger Quilter was their son.

Pierre-Louis-Paul RANDON DE BOISSET (1709–1776), receveur général des finances, fermier général, collector of books, pictures, sculpture etc. He travelled to Italy and The Netherlands, and was a friend of Greuze and Hubert Robert as well as of Boucher, whose drawings were heavily represented in his collection. His posthumous sale, one of the most celebrated of the era (yielding 1,320,149 livres), was particularly rich in Dutch paintings. In addition to the two Rosalbas in that sale, a third descended in the family until acquired by the Louvre in 2023.

Gustav RAU (1922–2002), doctor, collector and philanthropist. The son of a wealthy German industrialist, he took over the business, but, at the age of 40, he retrained to become a paediatrician. He sold the family business to establish a medical charity, and worked himself in Nigeria and Zaire for 20 years. During this period his only indulgence was the collection of paintings of all schools which he assembled and stored in Switzerland. In 1985 he constructed a building to house the collection in Marseille, but subsequently his collection was donated to Unicef in Köln with the intention of its being sold to raise funds. Exhibitions of the collection took place in Paris 2001, Dayton, Bergamo 2002.

Charles Christian REISEN (London 1679–1725), seal and gem engraver, director of Kneller's academy, son of a Norwegian who settled in London in 1666. A sale of the "very curious collection of pictures, medals, seals, stones, prints, drawings and other valuable curiosities of that eminent artist Mr Charles-Christian Reisen" included a number of old master drawings, as well as one lot with four heads in crayons.

Jacques-Louis-Étienne de REISET (1771–1835), régent de la Banque de France, had a number of children, among whom were several notable collectors. Gustave-Armand-Henri, comte de Reiset (1821–1905), ministre plénipotentiaire, writer about XVIII^e figures, owned several pastels. His brother Frédéric Reiset (1815–1890) was conservateur in the Louvre, first of drawings, then paintings, before becoming Directeur des musée nationaux in 1874. He sold a large collection of pictures to the duc d'Aumale (q.v.). Of two brothers, Jacques (1811–1868), receveur de finances, also owned a La Tour (auto), while Jules de Reiset (1818–1896) was a député and author; a sister Colette married baron Étienne Martin de Beurnonville (q.v.). Jacques-Louis-Étienne's younger brother, Antoine, vicomte de Reiset (1775–1836), was a soldier; his son Antoine-Justin-Henry (1815–1869) inherited the title of vicomte de Reiset, which passed to his son Tony-Henry-Auguste (1858–1925), historien, homme de lettres.

Two sons of the banker Albert REITLINGER and his wife Emma Brunner became important collectors. Henry Scipio Reitlinger (1885–1950), a mining engineer, was both a collector and scholar of old master drawings. He established a trust which operated the Reitlinger Bequest Museum between 1951 and 1987; parts of the collection, including French satirical prints, Japanese woodcuts, ceramics etc., were given to the Fitzwilliam Museum in 1991. Other works from Reitlinger's personal collection were sold at Sotheby's; a pastel by Russell, offered there in 1986, was withdrawn from the sale. His brother Gerald Reitlinger (1900–1978), artist, writer and art collector, published an extensive study of the prices of works of art over two centuries. He donated his important collection of ceramics to the Ashmolean, and his gift included a pastel by Vispré (Farr).

Ernest Herbert RENTON (1848–1921), London dealer in furniture, curios and pictures, of 26b King Street, St James's from at least 1893. He lent a number of pastels to the Paris 1911 exhibition, and sold some to Émile Gross (q.n.). He also had pastels by Carriera, Cotes, Gardner, Hamilton, Hoare, Humphry, Russell. In 1921 the business was purchased by Cecil Partridge.

L'abbé Louis-Joseph REYNOIRD (Brignolles 14.I.1727 - Paris 17.VIII.1803), old master collector-dealer whose name was variously misspelt Renou, Renon, Renoir, Renouard, Reynouard etc. According to a letter to Desfriches from Haudry of 3.II.1780, Reynoird was a "brocanteur" whose dealings for the church (supplying them with pictures) led to his being given the office of chanoine at Cambrai, where he was reçu in 1772 (having previously been a priest at Aix). He was recorded as purchaser at a number of important sales, e.g. Jullienne's in 1767, and he held a largish sale in 1780. No pastels were recorded in his inv. p.m. which included 195 pictures. From the name of his heir, his nephew Marc-Antoine Lamanoid, we can deduce that Reynoird was the son of Joseph Reynoird, marchand droguiste à Brignolles, Var, and Thérèse Allemont who were married in Belgentier, Var, in 1710.

Sir Joshua REYNOLDS (1723–1792). Starting seriously around 1752, Reynolds formed one of the largest and most important art collections of its day. He visited Paris to attend the Crozat de Thiers sale in 1771. The collection was particularly rich in figurative drawings, which Reynolds viewed as an important working aid, and the Italian masters of the 16th and 17th centuries were well represented. Reynolds owned sheets with coloured chalk or pastel by artists from Barocci to Lely. Some 6000 old master drawings were included in the sales between 1794 and 1798, as well as more than 400 paintings. These sales took place in 1795, at a period when prices for eighteenth century portraits were very depressed. A further sale took place 16–26.V.1821 after the death of his niece, Mary Palmer, Countess of Thomond, where the mythological paintings attracted much higher prices than the portraits.

John RHODES (1814–1898), of Potternewton House, Leeds: a stockbroker, he retired in 1881 and became a patron and collector. He owned a Liotard pastel, then thought to be a portrait of Lady Hawke by John Russell, as well as another Russell, of John Green, founder of the Leeds Pottery.

James Henri RICAU (1916–1993), from New Orleans; lived in a Greek Revival house on Hudson River; collector of mainly nineteenth-century American paintings and sculpture, much of it now in the Chrysler Museum of Art in Norfolk, Virginia. He owned a drawing by Wright of Derby.

Seymour de RICCI (1881–1942): art historian, born in England but raised in Paris by his mother of Italian origin, educated at the Sorbonne. He took French citizenship in 1901. He initially studied antiquities, Egyptology and bibliography, later turning to mediaeval and renaissance manuscripts. In 1929 he published a catalogue of the musée Cognacq-Jay. He seems to have dealt, or acted as agent, for a number of collectors. A number of sheets from his own collection were sold at Drouot, 10.VI.2009.

Pierre-Joseph RICHARD, dit de Lédans (1736–1816), chevalier de Saint-Louis, served as capitaine de la légion de Saint-Domingue 1766–72 (but was granted extended leave of absence for ill health), later lieutenant-général d'infanterie, gouverneur des pages de Madame. He is best known for the collection of Carmontelle portraits which he assembled after the death of his friend the artist; they passed to Pierre de La Mésangère (1761–1831), were acquired at auction by Major Gordon Duff and then sold through Colnaghi to the duc d'Aumale (q.n.). His posthumous sale included vast numbers of paintings, in numerous multiple lots (it seems unlikely that all the attributions can have been correct). The pastel section, in four numbered lots, included 91 pastels, 10 of named sitters, 30 unidentified men, the remainder women or children; 79 anonymous, 33 oval. A portrait by Vallière, sd 1777, was exhibited at Versailles 2019.

François-Antoine ROBIT, l'aîné (1744–c.1820), négociant, secrétaire du roi au parlement de Besançon 1785, art collector and dealer. From 1801 he was evidently in financial difficulties, with documents in the AN showing him compounding with creditors between 1801 and 1830; he died during this process at an unknown date (usually reported as 1815 by confusion with that of his youngest brother). He was the eldest son of Antoine-Léonard Robit, a marchand-fripier in Paris who married, in 1736, Marie-Nicole Durier. He had two brothers: Jean-Antoine Robit, a marchand tailleur (who married an Hélène-Josephine Evrard, by whom he had a son called François-Antoine Robit (1768–1820), a marchand boucher; the youngest brother, born 26.II.1751, was also called François-Antoine Robit, le jeune (his god parents were his sister Marie-Françoise and his elder brother). a marchand drapier, who died in Paris, 29.VIII.1815, celibate, aged 63. François-Antoine Robit l'aîné seems also to have been celibate; from his carte de sûreté issued 21.VI.1793 we know that he born in Paris in 1743/44. Robit collected mainly Dutch and French paintings, reportedly assembled over a period of 30 years before a large sale in 1801. His name, possibly a misreading of another collector, appears on annotated sales catalogues as a purchaser of pastels by Méréelle (after Rosalba) and Mengs.

Einsatzstab Reichsleiter ROSENBERG (“ERR”), headed by the Nazi ideologue Alfred Rosenberg (1893–1946). A number of pastels were among the collections seized by the Nazis from Jewish collections in Paris and elsewhere during the war. Some of these were destined for Hitler's Führermuseum (q.v.); others for the personal collections of other German leaders. Sorting places included the Louvre and Jeu de Paume in Paris, Neuschwanstein in Germany and the Lager Peter repository in Altaussee, Austria. The task of recuperation is not complete. The ERR card index is available on microfilm from the US Government's National Archives and Records Administration (“NARA”), while the Deutsches historisches Museum hosts online databases of the pictures assembled for the Führermuseum (v. Hitler) and those recuperated through the Munich Central Collecting Point (“CCP”) on behalf of the Bundesamt für zentrale Dienste und offene Vermögensfragen (“BADV”) and other responsible institutions. A database of the objects collected mainly from French Jewish families assembled at the Jeu de Paume is also online, at www.errproject.org.

Henri ROSENHEIM (1850–1920), born in Germany but naturalised French in 1891, banker in Paris, 2 rue Rembrandt, chairman of the Anglo-French Matabeleland and East Rand mining companies, owned a La Tour autoportrait in 1900. He also owned paintings by Gainsborough and Lawrence.

Lessing J. ROSENWALD (1891–1979), of Jenkintown, Philadelphia, businessman and collector, heir to the Sears-Roebuck retailing fortune. He was a bibliophile and chess enthusiast as well as a collector of paintings, drawings and more than 20,000 prints, now in the National Gallery of Art, Washington.

Claude Dickason ROTC (1878–1961) of Albany and The Elms, Park Road, Teddington, Middlesex, inventor, scholar, dog breeder and art collector, born in Waterloo, Lancashire, the son of a barrister of Scottish and American origin; his great uncle was Benjamin Rotch, MP. He commenced his career as a rubber grower in Ceylon; on his return to England he served as a director of the London Asiatic and other rubber companies (in 1927 he made a patent application for a type of rubber paving block). He was also a freemason and author of studies on the history of masonry. As an art collector, his interests ranged from furniture and silver to old master paintings. He made major donations to the Fitzwilliam Museum (1942), to Trinity Hall, Cambridge (where he matriculated in 1898), the National Gallery (1962) and to the V&A (1957–63). When, in 1952, the British government appealed for works of art for Government buildings abroad, Rotch gave six works which are now in the Government Art Collection, including two pastels by John Russell.

The extended dynasty established by the Frankfurt banker Mayer Amschel ROTHSCHILD (1744–1812) is probably both the most numerous and the best known family of art collectors. Of the various branches, that founded in France by James de Rothschild (1792–1868) is particularly significant. His daughter Charlotte, baronne Nathaniel (1825–1899), painter and pupil of Nélie Jacquemart, was also a collector; her grandson Henry (1872–1946) and his son Philippe organised the 1929 Chardin exhibition; Henry wrote a monograph on the artist under the pseudonym of André Pascal. His Chardin autoportrait was sold in 1966, while his La Tour Duval de l'Épinois, for which he had paid a record price at the Doucet sale in 1912 (to protect it from the vibrations of buses in the Faubourg Saint-Honoré he went to the lengths of building a new home in the avenue du Bois), is now the glory of the Gulbenkian Museum in Lisbon. Charlotte's nephew Édouard (1868–1949) owned the celebrated Greuze pastel study for L'Heureuse Mère (now in the NGA, Washington). Her brother Edmond de Rothschild (1845–1934) bequeathed to the Louvre his collection of some 40,000 prints and 3000 drawings; he lent a La Tour duc de Bourgogne to the Cent pastels exhibition (Paris 1908a), while a Liotard (Mariette de Bassompierre) is now in Geneva. Other parts of his collections were inherited by his son James A. de Rothschild and are now at Waddesdon, which he inherited from Miss Alice (1847–1922) of the Viennese branch. Her brother Ferdinand had moved to England and constructed Waddesdon (v. Collections; the pastel holdings range from Gardner to Grimod de La Réynière). Alfons (1878–1942) and Eugène (1884–1976), Vienna, owned a group of six pastels of the Imperial family by Pierre Bernard in 1946; Eugène also owned Labille-Guiard's Mme Mitoire. James A.'s brother Maurice (1881–1957) was among those whose collections were subject to Nazi seizure during the war, including La Tour's président de Rieux now in the Getty (others were Boucher, Le Départ; Carriera, jeune fille; Fragonard, femme; Raeburn [Hodges], Mr & Mrs Patterson; La Tour, Animé, marquise de Rumilly; Russell, his nephew; Mme Roslin's autoportrait; he also lent a La Tour Mme de Pompadour to the Cent pastels exhibition). After the war Maurice and his only son Edouard Alphonse (1926–1997) lived in Geneva. Maurice had inherited the fortune of the childless Adolph (1823–1900), from the Naples branch, who also owned a Rosalba (Ceres). From the English branch, Mayer Amschel (1818–1874) built Mentmore, which passed to his son-in-law Lord Rosebery (Ducreux, auto; Russell, Col. Thornton) and was offered to the nation before the notorious sale in 1977.

The SABIN Galleries date back to the business established by Joseph Sabin in Oxford in 1848; branches were subsequently established in Philadelphia and New York, as well as in London (172 New Bond Street for some years). The firm dealt in rare books as well as paintings and prints. Joseph's son Frank T. Sabin (–1915) was succeeded in turn by Frank M. Sabin and by further generations.

Paul J. SACHS (1878–1965), professor of fine arts at Harvard, associate director of the Fogg Art Museum, collector of drawings.

The SACKVILLE GALLERY, established by Max Rothschild (1875–1939), with R. R. M. Sée (q.v.) until 1912 but continued by Rothschild thereafter. Under the former's direction, they exhibited several English pastels in the Paris 1911 exhibition (Alefounder, 2 pastls). The gallery also had pastels by Russell etc.

Jacques Eli SAFRA (c.1940–), banker and art collector based in Geneva. His extensive collection of old master pictures includes one pastel by La Tour, Mlle Fel, included in the 26.I.2023 sale at Sotheby's New York.

Nicolò SAGREDO (1606–1676), Venetian ambassador in Rome and doge 1675–76, was responsible for starting the family's important collections; he owned several pastels by Bassano. Many of the sheets were bound into the so-called Sagredo-Borghese album which seems to have passed to Nicolò's brother Stefano and then to Stefano's son Zaccaria Sagredo (1653–1729). Zaccaria made a large number of additions, and his collection numbered some 2000 drawings and paintings, among them a Rosalba head as well as pastels by Bassano, Boltraffio and Caliarì (he acquired the Caliarì family collection). His wife Cecilia sold the collection c.1743, and it seems to have been dispersed during the 19th century. A large group was acquired by a collector in Lyon c.1919. A number of sheets have come onto the art market since the early 1990s.

Louis-Philippe Rousselin de Corbeau, vicomte de SAINT-ALBIN (1822–1879), librarian to Empress Eugénie; scholar and collector. The family lived in the rue vieille du Temple, and Philippe inherited from his father, founder of the Constitutionnel (rumoured to have been the natural son of the duc d'Orléans, adopted by an army officer), the papers and portraits associated with the Revolution collected by Barras (some of which are now in the musée Carnavalet). He donated a sanguine drawing by Gabriel de Saint-Aubin after Coppel's Adrienne Lecouvreur to the Comédie-Française in 1849. His sister and heir was Hortense Rousselin, wife of Achille Jubinal (1810–1875), herself an amateur pastellist (a copy after Liotard from 1840 is known). A number of pastels were in the Jubinal de Saint-Albin collection (and had passed to her daughter Mme George Duruy, née Amélie-Louise-Eugénie Jubinal (1860–1926) by 1923). Two pastels thought to be by La Tour were donated to the musée de Bagnères-de-Bigorre in 1864. A collection of curiosities, scientific instruments etc. was sold at auction in Paris, 18.II.1960.

Charles-Paul-Jean-Baptiste de Bourgevin de Vialart de SAINT-MORYS

(1743–1795), soldier, conseiller au parlement, and amateur engraver. His great-uncle Étienne-Paul Boucher (1701–1779), marchand drapier, secrétaire du roi, settled his fortune on him when, in 1769, he married Boucher's illegitimate daughter, Éléonore-Elisabeth-Angélique de Beauterne, subject of an oil portrait by Duplessis. Greuze painted both Saint-Morys and his son; Saint-Morys had an affair with Mme Greuze. A sale took place in 1786 including a number of drawings with pastel (see below). His collection of XVIe-XVIIIe Italian, French and Netherlandish drawings was seized when he emigrated during the Revolution, and is now in the Louvre; it includes pastels by Lafosse (jeune femme), Nanteuil (Talon), W. Vaillant (magistrat) and Vouet (homme). He may also have owned a sheet by Jean I Dubois. His son, Charles-Étienne de Vialart de Saint-Morys (1772–1817), known in exile in England as Count de Carrière, sold a large group of drawings at auctions in London in 1797–98, including sheets by Rosalba and Pillement which were not however described as, and may not have been, pastels.

Victorien-Léandre SARDOU (1831–1908), playwright. Trained as a doctor, he was passionately interested in the theatre, and wrote a number of comedies and historical dramas, interpreted by actresses such as Réjane and Sarah Bernhardt. Fédora (1882) and Tosca (1887) were both turned into operas. He was admitted to the Académie française in 1877. In 1872 he married the daughter of Eudoxe-Augustin Soulié, conservateur du musée de Versailles. He assembled a collection of works of art relating to the theatre. In addition to the pastels in his posthumous sale, a copy or reproduction of a La Tour preparation of Mme de Pompadour (Saint-Quentin, LT 22) appears in the background of a photograph of Sardou in his study at Marly, c.1907.

L'abate SARTORI: the subject of a portrait by Carriera. According to a notice issued from Venice, 26.XII.1788 (printed in the dual language Mercurio italico, but apparently overlooked until noted here), he “would wish to dispose of” a number of pictures by Rosalba and by “her excellent pupil Felicita Sartori (afterwards Hoffmann)”. It is thought that Felicita was his sister, but there is some confusion with Giambattista Sartori, who married Lucietta Pellegrini (another abate Giambattista Sartori, much later, was Canova's half-brother). This is compounded by the inclusion of two small portraits (miniatures?) by Felicita Sartori of “a young sister of Felicita” and of “abate Sartori, brother of Felicita”, which would appear to correspond with the Rosalba pendants of Giambattista and Lucietta.

His enormous collection was dispersed in seven sales in Paris and Vienna in 1907. Conforming with, and perhaps forming, the taste of the day, he held pastels by Boucher, Carriera, La Tour and Vigée Le Brun as well as Russell and Hamilton. Around 1860, while still in Vienna, he married Theresia Brunner (c.1838–1907) (possibly related to Charles Brunner, q.n.). Among their daughters, Emma married the dealer Eugène Fischhof; Caroline married the collector Dr Paul Mersch (qq.n.); while Emilie married the sculptor Stanislas Lamy.

Robert René Meyer SÉE (1883–p.1927), art expert, author of a monograph on English pastels and of studies on Masquerier, Chinnery and Romney. The son of a wine merchant, he came to England in 1902. In 1905 was described as a motor salesman on his marriage certificate. His wife, née Grace Mercia Sibley (she was later painted by Severini, a portrait for which a pastel study was made), inherited a number of pastels of members said to be of the Sibley-Braithwaite family (the genealogy is however obscure). After working as manager for Martin Henry Colnaghi (q.n.), Sée joined Max Rothschild at the Sackville Gallery c.1909. The firm arranged the exhibition of English pastellists in Paris in 1911, and dealt in works by Gardner and similar artists. In 1912 Sée left to open the Marlborough Galleries with Gilbert, vicomte de Rorthays and Sam Nyburg at 34 Duke Street, St James. He was serving as an officer in the French army in 1915 when he gave evidence in the trial of an insurance claim involving suspicion of fraud. He was later employed by Xavier Haas (q.n.) to catalogue his collection of Romney drawings, and he also wrote the catalogue of Haas's 1927 sale in New York. Attributions and descriptions of media are not always reliable. According to Webb the Russell exhibition of 1911 was a financial failure, and a plan to issue a new edition of Williamson 1894 failed as Sée disappeared.

Count Antoine SEILERN (1901–1978), of 58 Princes Gate, art historian and collector. His extensive collection of old master paintings and drawings was donated anonymously to the Courtauld Institute, the National Gallery and the British Museum (which received a Luttrell pastel in 1946).

Jacques SELIGMANN (1858–1923) was the son of a German flour merchant. He moved to France early and worked for the auctioneer Paul Chevallier at the Hôtel Drouot, and then for Charles Mannheim. In 1880 he set up independently from premises in the rue des Mathurins, moving c.1900 to the place Vendôme. A split with his brother Arnold (1860–1935) in 1912 resulted in the creation of two firms, Arnold Seligmann & Cie remaining in the place Vendôme, while J. Seligmann & Cie conducted business from the palais de Sagan; a New York branch was opened in 1913. Jacques's elder son Germain Seligman [sic] (1893–1978) continued the business, while André (1898–1945) established his own gallery on the Faubourg Saint-Honoré before moving to New York in 1940. A number of the firm's pictures were seized by the ERR during the war, among them pastels by Lenoir, Masquerier (2), Russell (2), Vigée, Vigée Le Brun (attributed), and Willison. J. Seligmann records are conserved at the Smithsonian, and include records of Germain's personal collection (which included a Perronneau pastel).

Lucretia Johanna van Winter (1785–1845), married to Hendrik Six van Hillegom, was also a collector; she is the subject of a pastel by Tischbein now in the Six Foundation, Amsterdam. Other pastels owned by members of the family included pendants by Hodges (Pieter ter Borch & wife).

Thomas Moore SLADE (1749–1831), of Old Bond Street, London, picture-dealer and chapman, was declared bankrupt in 1810 when an auction took place; probably the same Slade whose anonymous sale in London, Graham & Hindle, 3.VII.1801, included a Rosalba Venus. He was the son of Sir Thomas Henry Slade, the naval architect who designed HMS Victory. At his death his will stated that all his pictures already belonged to Phoebe Charlotte Tailhade.

Sir Hans SLOANE, Bt (1660–1753), physician and collector; his collection formed the nucleus of that of the British Museum. He owned Faithorne's pastel of John Ray.

Jean-Baptiste SLODTZ (1699–1759), Paris art dealer and restorer, partner of Pierre Remy, described also as peintre du duc d'Orléans. Among the works he restored was a pastel by Carriera. He was the son of the sculptor Sébastien Slodtz.

John Wentworth SMITH (1871–1967), of 36 Wilbury Road, Hove, member of the London stock exchange, making his fortune in shipping and coal: his collection of Russells was acquired from prestigious dealers such as Wertheimer. A number of sales took place after his death; his estate was valued at £229,943.

Joseph SMITH (1682–1770), British consul in Venice, collector of pictures, books, coins etc., and patron of the arts. Smith lived in Venice from 1700, where he initially joined the bankers Thomas and Samuel Williams, becoming senior partner in 1720. Smith was finally appointed Consul in 1744 (remaining in office until 1760). His enormous collections of books and pictures were bought by George III: the books now form part of the British Library, while the pictures are now in the Royal Collection. However it seems that some items were retained, and there is a particularly large discrepancy between the 38 pieces by Rosalba listed in a manuscript inventory by Smith around 1762 with a view to sale to George III and the six now in the Royal Collection, several of which were acquired from other sources (only one Rosalba was included in the posthumous sale organised by Christie's, 16–17.V.1776). Among those ceded was the pastel of John Law acquired by Walpole. Smith also commissioned pastels by Nazzari of each of the artists he patronised: Smith was instrumental in bringing Zuccarelli to London, Visintini redesigned the façade of Smith's Palazzo Balbi, and worked with Giandomenico Tiepolo at the Villa Valmarana in 1757. Visintini also engraved 38 vedute by Canaletto, an artist for whom Smith was agent.

Henri-Augustin SOLEIROL (1792–1860), chef de bataillon du génie, biographer of Molière. He assembled a “Galerie théâtrale”, consisting of 755 prints and 641 drawings and miniatures of drawings and prints, sold in Paris (1-4.XII.1862, 30.XI.–3.XII.1864). Some of these, including several “pastels du temps” (Desangles, Labille-Guiard, Carle Vanloo, Éc. fr.), were reproduced in engravings by Frédéric Hillemacher in de Manne 1861. His brother Joseph-François Soleirol (1781–1863) formed a large botanical collection.

Claude-Léger SORBET, sgr de Rouany (1716–1788), of Itteville, chevalier de Saint-Michel 1773, chirurgien-major des mousquetaires gris; he retired in 1775 with a pension of 3344 livres. He was a friend of Pigalle (who did a bust of his father Bernard Sorbet), and Moitte engraved his portrait by Cochin. Greuze's 1755 pendant oils of Sorbet and his wife Marie-Anne Lecomte are in Orléans. In 1766 he commissioned an altarpiece for the church of Saint-Germain d'Itteville; the artist was Jean-Baptiste Alizard, a relative of the abbé Nolle. His great-grandson Anathole-Marie Sorbet de Rouany (1816-p.1885), libraire, inherited the unsold lots in a sale p.m. at Versailles, Bart, 17.II.1866, of which the contents were detailed in a letter from Eudore Soulié to the comte de Nieuwerkerke (Archives des musées nationaux, AN 20150044/56). They included “sculptures de Pigalle, Mouchy, Lecomte... peintures de La Tour (L'abbé Nolle), Greuze”; the La Tour was bought in, as it was offered to the Louvre (and refused), 10.IX.1866 and then offered to the emperor, whose cousin, princesse Mathilde, acquired it.

Jacques-Germain SOUFFLOT (1713–1780), architecte du roi, contrôleur des Bâtiments, associé libre 1760, honoraire amateur 1779 de l'Académie royale de peinture. He had an extensive art collection, documented in his estate inventory (AN MC/RS//919, 7.IX.1780) by Antoine-Louis Godeffroy and Le Brun and then consigned for sale with a catalogue by Le Brun. In addition he owned a “tableau” by Boucher of Mme Deshays known from the Bonnet engraving; it does not appear in either list. The copy of the Louis XVI portrait was anonymous in the inventaire (valued at 9 livres), while the “deux jolies bustes de femme”, also valued at 9 livres, were given to “Peron...” (presumably Perronneau, but the page is torn at the margin) in the inventaire, reassigned to “M. Loir” (probably Alexis rather than Marianne, as other artists were referred to thus) in the sale.

Aubrey Beauclerk, 5th Duke of ST ALBANS (1740–1802): in addition to family portraits, he acquired a Rosalba in the Dalton sale and several (which were sold soon after) at that of his brother-in-law, the Earl of Bessborough (q.v.). As some of these reappeared in the Bessborough collection, it is possible that the 1802 sale included items that were never in fact the duke's.

Henry or Henri-Julius STETTINER (Königsberg 1842 - Paris 1926), antiquaire, of 27, rue de Choiseul (1871), 29 Chaussée-d'Antin (1885). He advertised that he had a house in London "où il vend les choses anglaises achetées à Paris". This may have been 24 Cranbourn Street, where, according to an advertisement in The Times, 1872, "amateurs and collectors will find his extensive collections of fine old furniture, clocks, candelabra, bronzes, Sèvres, Dresden...and other Porcelains, the whole of which will be offered at such prices as to ensure a ready sale." A few years later he moved to his father-in-law's house at 14 Wimpole Street - Stettiner married Gertrude, daughter of Frederick Davis, in 1875, but was living at 14 rue Halévy, Paris, when two sons were born in London (1876, 1877). He was recorded in the 1881 census at the Hotel Dieuonné, 11 Ryder Street where the words "British subject" were added to his place of birth. The second son, Oscar Stettiner (1877–1948), continued the business, latterly from 18 avenue Matignon. Stettiner acquired pastels by Cotes, Ducreux, Gardner, La Tour, Lawrence, Perronneau and Vigée in sales from 1911. Among his clients were Sir Richard Wallace, Ernest Cognacq and Anatole France, to whom he showed two charming pastels by Nattier.

Ian Colin STEWART (1949–2019), of Beal House, Yorkshire, director of a cosmetics company, collector of general antiques, sold in Endinburgh, Lyon & Turnbull, 14–15.X.2020. The sale included half a dozen pastels by Howare, Pond, Russell, etc., mostly acquired c.2010.

St George St George, né Usher, Baron ST GEORGE of Hatley St George (1715–1775), sheriff of Roscommon, MP. "A great collector of pictures", he started the collection which was subsequently at Carton (q.v.), and included pastels by Carriera and Nogari presumably collected in Italy where a Carriera portrait of him must have been made. Thias has been confused with the second pastel of him, also recorded at Carton, now attributed to Pond. Ingamells does not list an early enough trip to Italy, but we know he was out of the kingdom in the 1740s from a dispute over land at Eyre Connaught, and his son was born in Paris in 1755.

Mrs Berry V. STOLL, née Alice Speed (1908–1996), granddaughter of James Breckinridge Speed (q.v.), bequeathed $50 million to the Speed Art Museum having earlier given them a pastel by Perronneau. She was the subject of a notorious kidnapping in 1934 for a $50,000 ransom.

Edward "Ned" Townsend STOTESBURY (1849–1938), banker, of Whitmarsh Hall, near Philadelphia; partner at J. P. Morgan and Drexel & Co; and his second wife, née Lucretia "Eva" Roberts (1865–1944), formerly Mrs Cromwell. Duveen supplied two female pastels by Perronneau (which he had acquired from Lady Dorothy Nevill) on approval from 1922, at a price of $15,000; they were still on approval in 1930, and then required repair, but were purchased soon after. They were both sold in Mrs Stotesbury's estate auction with identities and attributions confused with other pastels she owned.

Isidor STRAUS (1845–1912) founded the Macy's department store business with his brother. He died with his wife on the Titanic. Two of their seven children were collectors. Herbert Nathan Straus (1881–1933), youngest of the Straus brothers, and his wife, née Therese Kuhn (1884–1977), were collectors of French drawings, some of which are now in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York. Four dozen French drawings, including works by Boucher, Fragonard and Saint-Aubin, were donated to the Fogg Art Museum in 1978 (Herbert was at Harvard), along with ten sculptures. Jesse Isidor Straus (1872–1936) was US ambassador to France 1933–36. His widow, née Irma S. Nathan (1876–1970), kept the collection of French drawings, complemented by French XVIII^e furniture, boiseries and objets d'art, in her Park Avenue apartment.

William SYKES (1660–1724), painter and picture dealer, at Two Golden Balls in Portugal Row, Lincoln's Inn Fields. He was a member of the Virtuosi of St Luke. Biographical information can be inferred from his will and that of his son William, who died in 1728; one of the latter's sons was Francis Sykes (1715–1771), the enamelist. According to Vertue, "Mr Bullfinch Bought all Mr Betterons Pictures amongst which were a great many Crayon pictures of famous Playerses these he sold to Mr Sykes." "Mr SYKES's extraordinary collection of original and other pictures" was sold at auction on 3.iii.1724/5 and the following days (not in Lugt, but a photocopy is in the Frick, repr. artworld.york.ac.uk). It included several crayons:

L. TABOURIER, whose sale took place in 1898, seems to have been Louis-Léon-Alexandre-Jérôme Tabourier (1858–1897), of 53 avenue Montaigne, a fabricant de tissus and chevalier de la Légion d'honneur. His father Auguste-Etienne-Louis Tabourier (1822–1898) had the same profession and was an officier of the order.

Marie-Joseph d'Hostun, comte de Tallard, 2e duc d'Hostun, dit de TALLARD (1684–1755). A soldier, he was promoted to the Saint-Esprit four years before the death of his father, the maréchal de Tallard, in 1728. His wealth allowed him to assemble a spectacular collection of old master pictures from sales such as those of Verrue and Crozat. Carriera was almost the only contemporary artist he included.

Rosalba CARRIERA

Lot 117: Deux Tableaux des plus précieux de cette Fille célèbre, peints au pastel; chacun desquels est composé d'un groupe de deux Figures de femmes en demi-corps, qui caractérisées par des attributs convenables au sujet, représentent dans le premier Tableau la Paix & la Justice, & dans le second les deux poésies; celle qui chante les louanges de Dieu, & celle qui ne connoît que les plaisirs & les jeux. Cette dernière est couronnée de fleurs, & la tête de sa Compagne est environnée d'étoiles. Ces deux morceaux sont sous des glaces, ils viennent du Cabinet de M. Pasquier. Ils avoient été apportés en France par M. le Cardinal de Polignac. Il seroit difficile de trouver deux plus beaux pastels que ceux que nous annonçons. Ils ont cela de singulier, que ce sont des compositions, & que les autres pastels du même auteur ne consistent pour la plupart qu'en une seule tête. Les talents supérieurs de Mlle. Rosalba, dans la peinture au pastel, sont universellement reconnus. L'on trouve dans ses ouvrages le gracieux de la composition, joint à une touche spirituelle, & à un coloris séducteur. Notre Académie Roiale se trouve infiniment flattée de compter au nombre de ses Membres cette excellente Artiste. [1800 [ou] 2800 livres; Silvestre pour Mme la Dauphine]

Lot 204: Six Tableaux, qui seront divisés à la Vente; savoir, cinq Portraits des Dames de France, tant à l'huile qu'au pastel, couverts de glaces, dont un sans bordure; la première Fille de M. le Dauphin, peinte à l'huile: M. le Duc de Bourgogne, d'après M. Natier: un Portrait de Louis XIV à Cheval; & une Femme dans le Bain [392 livres]

Frederick TESSIER (1848–1923), of Guildford, later Brighton; a sale after his move from Guilford in London, Christie's, 13.III.1914, included pastels by Cipriani, Rosalba, Hoare and Vestier.

Greve Carl Gustaf TESSIN (1695–1770), celebrated connoisseur, Swedish ambassador in Paris 1739–42, with his wife, née Ulrika Lovisa Sparre (1711–1768). In 1741 Tessin sent the pictures he had bought in Paris back to Stockholm; the list is reprinted below. Some (marked LU) were sold to Lovisa Ulrika (collection catalogued by C. W. von Düben; a pastel landscape sent as a gift to Tessin by Oudry in 1747 also seems to have ended up with Adolf Fredrik). The estate inventory conducted in 1770 at Åkerö is also reproduced, listing separately collected pictures and family portraits. Much of the collection was dispersed at public sales, at Åkerö, 4–16.II.1771 or at Stockholm, Académie des Arts libéraux, 1786, the catalogue for which is also set out below. Tessin's support for Lundberg was critical in establishing that artist's position in Paris. Their relationship remained close after Tessin returned to Sweden, with Lundberg following a few years later. Lundberg made innumerable portraits of Tessin, his wife and members of their family.

Adolphe-Narcisse, comte THIBAUDEAU (1795–1856), collector of paintings, drawings and prints. During his lifetime his collection enjoyed a high reputation as it had been assembled at great expense - the drawings alone had cost over Fr150,000; but his sale was a great disappointment, the 831 lots achieving less than Fr30,000, many items selling for less than Fr10. His illegitimate son Alphonse Wyatt Thibaudeau (c.1840–c.1892) was an art historian and dealer in Paris and London (18 Green Street, St Martin's Place). His interests included pictures of all kinds. In 1889 he fled to America to escape his creditors. A Bernard Vaillant pastel in the British Museum was acquired from him.

François TRONCHIN des Délices (1704–1798), banker, magistrate, writer and art collector; cousin of the famous physician, Théodore Tronchin. The Liotard pastel of him alludes to his collection by a Rembrandt on the easel. In addition to the portrait of his wife, François Tronchin seems only to have owned one other Liotard, a pastel of a Dlle de La Croix (this figured in his catalogue of 1765 as well as in his 1801 sale in Paris, where it fetched a very low price). Tronchin was godfather to Liotard's second daughter Marianne in 1767. In addition to numerous family portraits by artists from Liotard and La Tour to Juel, various generations have owned pastels by Liotard and Carriera. Tronchin prepared a catalogue of 95 pictures which he sold to General Betzky for Catherine the Great in 1772; he also made a copy of the manuscript Crozat collection sold to Catherine the Great, annotating it with his comments on each picture (v. s.n. Crozat). This and his catalogue of Liotard and other Genevese collections are in the Bibliothèque de Genève (Arch. Tronchin 195).

Cardinale Silvio VALENTI GONZAGA (1690–1756): papal nuncio in Brussels and Madrid under Clement XI, secretary of state to Benedict XIV. His support for the arts led to the foundation of the Pinacoteca Capitolina and the reopening of the Accademia di San Luca; his protégé Subleyras painted his portrait. The cardinal's important personal collections of over 800 paintings and large numbers of drawings, books and objets d'art were established in the Villa Paolina in Rome where they appear in a celebrated painting by Giovanni Paolo Panini in 1749; in it Rosalba's Continents can be seen. The collection was inventoried in 1760 after the Cardinal's death, and included a number of pastels. His nephew, Luigi Valenti Gonzaga, sold the collection at auction in Amsterdam (Hendrik de Leth, Hendrik de Winter, 18.V.1763; 28.IX.1763).

John James VALLOTTON (1755–1828), of Clifton House, Old Brompton, a fashionable haberdasher with premises in Jermyn Street selling imported fancy dress from France. He acquired a number of John Russell pastels at the sale on 14.II.1807. He died in 1828, apparently (according to PRO documents) leaving an estate of £76,000. A younger son, also John James Vallotton (1801–), was listed as a bankrupt in 1831. His elder son Howell Leny Vallotton (1795–1858), a fancy warehouseman, of 6 Hyde Park Gate, was responsible for developing a large part of Kensington, buying up land from 1824 on; the development was put on hold when his father became bankrupt, and only resumed in 1841. The pastels were with his daughter Eliza (1818–1902), of 4 Essex Villas, Campden Hill, in 1894.

Joseph-Hyacinthe-François-de-Paule de Rigaud, comte de VAUDREUIL (1740–1817), patron and collector. Many of his pictures were acquired under the influence of J.-B.-P. Le Brun, with whose wife he was also closely allied. Financial pressures forced the sale through Le Brun of his main collection (24–25.XI.1784); many of these northern paintings are now in the Louvre. Calonne's fall led to his exile three years later, and the sale of his remaining collection. Thiéry's description of the hôtel in 1787 mentions Vigée Le Brun pastels, of Vénus liant les ailes de l'Amour, a Femme vue par le dos, probably the artist's mother, and "divers portraits, tant en pastel qu'à l'huile".

Horace WALPOLE, 4th Earl of Orford (1717–1797), writer and collector. He was the third son of Sir Robert Walpole, 1st Earl of Orford 1742 (1676–1745), prime minister, who formed an important collection of old master paintings which his grandson, George, 3rd Earl of Orford (1730–1791) sold to Catherine the Great. Boydell published a two-volume set of engravings of paintings in the collection in 1788 (including pastels by Rosalba, Apollo and Diana), and in 1790 a catalogue of the drawings made by Joseph and George Farington and Josiah Boydell which included two more supposedly after Rosalba (a second Apollo; and an Elizabeth Walpole) but probably miscatalogued. Horace Walpole, the 3rd Earl's uncle and successor to the title in 1791, undertook a Grand Tour from 1737 to 1741 with the poet

Thomas Gray. In Venice he sat to Rosalba Carriera. In Florence he met Horace Mann, as on a later trip to France he met Mme du Deffand, and Walpole's correspondence with these and other friends is his lasting monument. His inheritance on his father's death allowed him to lead the life of a connoisseur, cataloguing Sir Robert's art collection and creating his own Gothic fantasy at Strawberry Hill. He finally inherited his father's title in 1791. His collection descended to Earl Waldgrave, and much of it sold in 1842 (two Hamiltons, of Mrs Damer and the Countess of Upper Ossory, do not appear in the 1842 sale). His interest in pastels is measured by the numerous examples he owned by Carriera, Hamilton and Liotard; he himself made copies (in watercolour) of pastels by Rosalba and Luti. The collection also included a number of anonymous family portraits in pastel.

The WATEL-DEHAYNIN family originated from the marriage of Albert Watel and the daughter of the railway magnate Albert Dehaynin (1841–1908). Albert Watel-Dehaynin was président of a number of industrial concerns, including the Cie des Entrepôts et Magasins de Paris and the Cie française de gaz etc., and in 1914, his fortune was estimated at Fr800 million. The hôtel at 2 rue de la Faisanderie was decorated by Luc-Olivier Merson. His son Louis-Gabriel-Albert Watel-Dehaynin (1885–1972) married Antoinette-Céleste Lasson (1890–1960) in 1911. They were active collectors, buying Fragonards and other pictures expensively at the Doucet and other fashionable sales. They owned pastels by La Tour, M. & Mme Cassanéa de Mondonville.

Claude-Henri WATELET (1718–1786), de l'Académie française, receveur général des finances d'Orléans, author and amateur artist and engraver. As an habitué of Mme Geoffrin's salon, and at his own country house near Paris, Le Moulin-Joli, he mixed with the leading Enlightenment figures. He contributed on art to the Encyclopédie, and attempted a Dictionnaire des arts de peinture, sculpture et gravure, 1792, finished by Pierre-Charles Levesque (q.v.). He travelled widely, and was a member of the academies in Berlin, Cortona and Bologna, of the Accademia della Crusca in Florence, as well as an honorary member of the l'Académie royale de peinture et de sculpture. He collected avidly, particularly the works of his contemporaries, and engravings by Rembrandt were particularly well represented. La Tour exhibited his portrait in the Salon de 1753.

George WATSON-TAYLOR (1771–1841), né Watson, MP, bibliophile and collector, of Jamaica and Cavendish Square, London, son-in-law of Sir John Taylor, 1st Bt 1778 (1745–1786), FRS, Dilettanti 1776. Sir John collected paintings on his Grand Tour in 1773, sat to Reynolds and appears in Zoffany's Tribuna; his correspondence reveals that Gavin Hamilton continued to buy pictures for him in the 1770s. The Gardner family portrait and the full length of Taylor alone are likely to have been made in 1784 when Simon Taylor's correspondence indicates a trip to England. Watson added his wife's surname on their marriage in 1810. The couple inherited some £500,000 from her uncle, the prodigiously wealthy plantation owner Simon Taylor (much of the biographical information comes from the slavery research at UCL); however by 1823 the income from the West Indies evaporated, and his fortune was dissipated by extravagant purchases. His sale at Christie's, 13–14.VI.1823, included his collection of old master paintings, but no drawings. Subsequent sales took place in 1832, organised by George Robins, in London, 30.V.1832 & seq. and on the premises, Erlestoke Mansion, Devizes (9.VII.1832 & seq.). A report in the Gentleman's magazine, .VIII.1832, pp. 162f, does not mention the five Rosalba "crayons" which appear only in F. P. Paul-Louis WEILLER (1893–1993), aviator, industrialist, philanthropist and collector of old master drawings.

Francis Augustin WELLESLEY (1865–1935), JP, of independent means, living in London and Westfield Common, Woking: collector specialising in silhouette, plumbago and coloured chalk drawings and miniatures. He donated 6 drawings to the British Museum and a pastel to the NPG. His collection was dispersed in numerous London sales between 1914 and 1925. Since a number of Wellesley family portraits and other items belonging to Rev. Dr Henry Wellesley were included in the collection, it is assumed that Francis was a relation; but his claim to have been born in Paris in 1865 is not confirmed by any entry under that name in the État civil. The circumstances of the Sotheby's sale are described in a letter of 29.V.1920 reprinted by Ingamells 2009b. Wellesley also grew orchids. Like his friend G. C. Williamson, Wellesley was a Catholic, and was appointed a knight commander of the papal order of St Gregory the Great.

Emile WERTHEIMER (1873–1953), an American-born cinema owner of 2 Redington Gardens. London; his relationship with the homonymous London dealers is unclear. A group of pastels, including works by Rosalba, Russell, La Tour and Glain, was sold after his death.

Samson WERTHEIMER (1811–1892), born in Bavaria, set up a furniture business initially in Greek Street, London. His two sons continued as collectors and dealers. Charles John Wertheimer (1842–1911), of Norfolk Street, Park Lane, collected china, objets d'art and pictures, a number of which were stolen in 1907. His large group of English pastels included four sold by Christie's in 1912, with the remainder presumably inherited by his brother Asher Wertheimer (1844–1918), who had taken control of their father's business at 158 New Bond Street. According to Webb, the brothers competed against one another to acquire Russell pastels; his records show that between them the brothers handled more than 80, many purchased from the artist's descendants. In at least one documented case (and probably in a good many more), the purchase involved cash and the supply of a modern copy to induce reluctant owners to part with their pictures. Webb also mentions Asher's chief assistant, A. S. Clements. Asher's purchase of a Russell, The Agar family, was the subject of a court case concerning commission between the dealers involved; the picture had been purchased from the family for £150, while Wertheimer paid £1500 for it. At his posthumous sale in 1920, the £861 fetched by three Russells were consistent with the "marked depreciations" noted by the Connoisseur. Some of their pastels descended to Mrs Conway, née Joan Cicely Young (1898–1995), widow of Asher Wertheimer's son Conway Joseph Conway (1881–1953), barrister, of Turville Court, Henley-on-Thames, before the 2000 sale; one was presented to the Ashmolean Museum, to which Mrs Conway had donated rococo silver in 1959.

Forsyth WICKES (1876–1965), a lawyer in New York. His extensive collection of French art was bequeathed to the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, where it was installed following the decorative schemes of his own homes - in Paris, rue Weber; the château de Courtmoulins; Tuxedo Park in New York, and Starbord House, Rhode Island - where pictures, furniture and porcelain were intermingled. He had a particular taste for pastels, of which he owned a dozen (v. Collections, Boston, MFA for a list).

Joseph Early WIDENER (1871–1943), Philadelphia, inherited a fortune from his father derived from provisioning the army during the American civil war. Joseph was a racing enthusiast and a collector of furniture, sculpture, books and drawings; benefactor of the National Gallery of Art.

Nathan WILDENSTEIN (1851–1934), a tailor, left his native Alsace around 1870 and moved to Paris, where, in 1875, he opened a shop dealing in contemporary French paintings. By 1900 the business had broadened into one of the leading European dealers in old master pictures. Galleries were opened in New York in 1903, London in 1925 and subsequently in Tokyo and Buenos Aires. One of many donations was a pastel by Russell for the charitable auction in .IV.1917. Nathan's son Georges (1892–1963), art historian and connoisseur, established an important library and photographic archive, and published the catalogue raisonné of La Tour (1928). Georges's son Daniel (1917–2001) became chairman of the firm in 1968. He published catalogues on Monet and Renoir and revised and expanded catalogues on Chardin and Fragonard. His son Guy took over the business in 1990. The firm has handled a number of the most important French XVIII^e pastels, including La Tour's président de Riens.

Johann Georg WILLE (1715–1808), the German engraver from Königsberg, settled in Paris early and was taught by Largillierre; he was agrégé 1755; reçu 1761. Far more than an engraver, Wille was at the centre of the Paris art world, cultivating the friendship of artist and critics, and facilitating the interchange of ideas between France and Germany and elsewhere. He was also a collector and dealer. Wille bought a couple of pastels in 1761, apparently by Rigaud and Valade. A pastel by Heilmann appeared in his sale of 6–11.XII.1784.

George Charles WILLIAMSON (1858–1942), art historian and collector. The son of a cabinet-maker and upholsterer in Guildford (David Williamson, of William Williamson & Son), he was himself a member of the family firm until 1900. He was a specialist in miniatures (cataloguing J. P. Morgan's collection) and wrote numerous books on pastellists, miniaturists and painters, principally of the English school; he was also a bibliophile and collector of drawings and coins. Williamson lived at Burgh House, Hampstead (where he commissioned Gertrude Jekyll to design the garden; it is now a museum) from 1906 to 1924 before returning to Guildford, where he lived at Mount Manor House. He was fellow of numerous learned societies. In some of his publications he is shown as a Chevalier of the Légion d'honneur, and the degrees of Ph.D., D. Litt. and Litt.D. variously appeared after his name to which he does not seem to have been entitled. A Catalogue of the works of art belonging to Dr G. C. Williamson was privately printed in 1909, with a supplement in 1911; of the 329 works listed (mostly drawings and miniatures) only one was a pastel before 1800 (Labille-Guiard, self-portrait).

John WILSON (c.1755–c.1825), an “American loyalist from South Carolina”, married a Margaret Hazell in Georgetown in 1777. By 1789, he had moved to London and founded the European Museum, a commercial gallery, in King Street, London; he was named as principal manager. The pictures were for sale, and a series of catalogues were published as the New descriptive catalogue and plan of the European Museum, London, with various editions to 1813. After his first wife's death he married a Mrs Mary Bolam, née Dove in London in 1815. The business declined, and the property sold in 1823 to Christie's. The stock included pastels by Cotes (Dr Mead) and others.

John Waterloo WILSON (1815–1883), English collector and dealer, who was born in Brussels and lived in The Netherlands for over 30 years. He assembled a collection of Dutch (Vermeer, Frans Hals etc.), English and French pictures, most of which he bequeathed to the City of Brussels. An exhibition took place at the Galerie du Cercle artistique et littéraire, in 1873, accompanied by a lavish catalogue. The closing sale from his galerie in the avenue Hoche numbered some 199 works. He was dealer to Alphonse de Rothschild.

Levin Yardly WINDER (1787–1836), Virginia; acquired a group of pastels by Sharples when Felix, the artist's son, defaulted on a loan. His nephew was Nathaniel James Winder (1794–1844), whose son Dr Richard Bayley Winter (1828–1894) sold the group to a Baltimore merchant, Murray Harrison c.1865.

Henry WINTERFELD (1892–p.1940), born in Hamburg, naturalized US citizen in 1921 [not to be confused with his homonym (1901–1990), German playwright and writer of children's fiction under the pseudonym Manfred Michael, emigrated from Germany to Austria and France where he was interned in 1939 before emigrating to the USA in 1940]. He lived at the Villa Prima in Monte Carlo, then Villa La Vague, 217 Promenade des Anglais, Nice (where he was still at the time of the 1936 sale) when, in letters of 31.III.1927 to 18.II.1927, he proposed the gift of his collection to the Louvre (he was recorded as of American nationality then); the only pastel mentioned at that stage was the “La Tour” Mme de La Poulinière. On 30.XII.1930, Germain Seligman visited his collection at “La Vague”; his notes (Smithsonian, box 214, folder 13), finding a mixed collection, including, in the salon, “1 pastel de femme en rose, qu'on lui a vendu comme La Tour, et qu'il apprécie énormément. Il l'a payé plus de 2 millions et demi”; as well as “1 pastel Femme et nègre, rappelant Perronneau.”

Grenville Lindall WINTHROP (1864–1943), lawyer, donated his collection of mainly nineteenth-century art to the Fogg Art Museum in 1943. It had been formed under the influence of Paul J. Sachs and of the New York dealer Martin Birnbaum (q.v.). A travelling exhibition of highlights was in London, National Gallery, 2003. Several pre–1800 pastels were included in the Fogg donation, as well as some later pastiches or copies (after Bernard, Carriera, Vigée etc.). His second cousin Clara Bowdoin Winthrop (1876–1969) was also an art collector and philanthropist; she owned several pastels by Sharples, bequeathed to the Massachusetts Historical Society.

 Pastels: Boze; Hamilton; Hickey, Cosway; Jervas; Lawrence; Russell; E. Sharples; J. R. Smith

Frantz WITTOUCK (1855–1914), a Belgian sugar refiner, lent pastels by Gainsborough (Queen Charlotte) and Peters (Mrs Hadden-Brown) to the Paris 1911 exhibition. His brother and co-proprietor Paul Wittouck (1851–1917) lent a pair of Russells (Mr & Mrs Wilton) to the same exhibition, which descended to his grandson Eric Wittouck before a 1985 sale.

Samuel WOODBURN (1785–1853), of 184 Piccadilly, major expert and dealer in old master drawings in the 19th century; among his clients was the banker Thomas Dimsdale.

Sir James WRIGHT, Bt (1717–1804), of Woodford, diplomat and art collector, bequeathed to the Royal Academy, in 1796, the Cotes portrait of Dr Bromfield, “for the instruction of students...having observed how much crayon painting is fallen off in what he sees at the Exhibitions”. It had been bequeathed to him by the sitter (he may have known Bromfield’s son in Padua). As he had been British Resident in Venice it seems probable that he owned work by Rosalba. A sale was held after his death by Christie’s, 8–9.VI.1804, but contained no pastel.

Louis-Alexandre, dit le comte d’YVON (1813–1883), inspecteur du Garde-Meuble de la couronne, and his wife, Mary Anne Smith (1801–1892), of 20 rue de la Chaise, Paris, later 68 Boulevard de Courcelles, collectors of old master paintings, drawings, tapestries, objets d’art. D’Yvon published a study De la décadence des arts d’ornementation in 1861. The d’Yvon collection appears in Galgani’s New Paris guide for 1862 as a private museum, visible by application in writing; the tapestries in the grand salon alone were worth 100,000 francs. Mme d’Yvon’s origins were obscure, but certain facts can be gleaned from the sensational law case which reached the cour de cassation in 1874. The comtesse had previously been married, to a Mr Samuel Smith; after his death, she married d’Yvon, a man of “artistic tastes”, in London, on 11.IV.1842. The case concerns the daughter from her previous marriage whom she disowned to avoid paying her an annuity; and although the comtesse lost all her appeals in 1874, she again disowned her daughter in her will, leading to another case after her death against the comtesse’s nominated heir, Henri Challier de Grandchamps, a newspaper proprietor, again won by the daughter, Mme de Trégomain. The comtesse’s collections were sold after her death in two sales in 1892. An earlier sale took place in Paris, 27–28.I.1881, which included a Perronneau, bailli de Suffren.

Emilie YZNAGA (c.1859–1944), sister of Consuelo, Duchess of Manchester (1858–1909), daughters of Antonio Yznaga, né Iznaga del Valle of Cuba (whose fortune came from sugar) and Ravenswood, Louisiana. Her date of birth appears as 1864 in her US passport applications, although alternative dates as early as 1855 appears in some sources. Her apartment at 142 bis rue de Grenelle was the subject of a series of paintings by Jean Béraud, two of which (Paris, mAD) show a Perronneau pastel (Journa). She owned an oil Ducreux autoportrait in 1935 (which was also subsequently owned by her cousin, the comtesse Alain Costa de Beauregard, née Isnaga q.v.), and presented a number of French paintings to the National Gallery, London (8, among them the Nattier portrait of Manon Balletti, given in 1937 subject to a life interest), the Tate, the musée Carnavalet and musée des Arts décoratifs (including five Pillement oils). Many of the paintings were inherited from her sister.

Girsch ZÉLIKINE (1884–1930), marchand de timbres et monnaies; he had a son Isaac, dit Jean (1910–1934) by Louise-Gabrielle Fourneter (1887–1962), the subctect of a law case.
Vente, Paris, Drouot, Lair-Dubreuil, Baudoin, 22–23.V.1908, included pastels by Cherfils, Duplessis and a number of anonymes.

La comtesse ZOUBOV, née Rosario Julia Schiffner de Larrechea (1892–1984) inherited a fortune derived from sugar and property. In 1922 she married a Russian count; their daughter Tatiana died in 1957. The Fondation Zoubov was established in her memory. The Zoubov collection, in Geneva, includes two pastels by Pougin de Saint-Aubin.
